"And as complexions alter with the times,
Our wits have drawn the infection of our times."

Smith and Robinson ought to hit the plain people of this country all right.

The police having called our latest safe-crackers amateurs, let them now beat themselves lest the epithet come home to roost.

The Honorable Willie Opshaw, of Georgia, will run for Congress again after all—somebody has paid his fee for him. "Let your conscience be your guide!"

It is understood that in the campaign President Coolidge will maintain his customary silence in favor of Hoover.

Our candidate for Vice President will second the nomination of Gov. Smith, and if Nellie Ross, of Wyoming, stampees the convention what'll the Republicans do with their argument that in November the women will be for Hoover?

Houston's herd of 48 Rocky Mountain nightingales—one for each State—is unexpectedly augmented overnight by an additional member, and perhaps the Democrats will see a happy augury in this, and assign the infant to Porto Rico as she knocks at the door of the Union.

Hiram Evans arrives in Houston, but the real Wizard of this campaign is sticking quietly in Albany.

"Say Humidity,
You pestiferous permeator
Of an otherwise fairly respectable
Circumambient atmosphere,
What excuse for being
Have you got anyway?"

We seem to be having the year without a summer this year on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, but on Mondays don't forget that it isn't the heat.

"They fed him up with hopes and air,
Which soon digested to despair."
Jim Reed's Missourians find Dan Roper's diet sadly lacking in nutrition, and we yet hope to see the Senator at the head of the Department of Justice if he isn't chosen to preside over the Senate. We shudder to think what this master of irony and sarcasm is going to do in this campaign to St. Bill Vane.

In days gone by,
For which we sigh,
The small boy did his shopping
About the first day of July—
Laid in a generous supply,
And then began his popping.
From dawn to night
The sky was bright
With bursting bombs and rockets;
The Doctor's bill for picking shot,
From Willie's legs, I rather wot,
Depleted Daddy's pockets.

'Tis very sweet to have immunity,
And celebrate by the Community,
But Roman candles, you must know,
Can not be bought without the dough,
While even pinwheels are not cheap,
And "devil-chasers" still are steep.
So join the patriotic band,
And send your check in to the fund!

The Ku Klux Klan has arrived in Houston and it is rumored that even Tammany now regards a sheet as a highly appropriate article of attire.

We gather from Chairman Work's campaign plans that from time to time Mr. Coolidge will announce to the country the length and weight of the trout he catches.

American humor is what enables a perspiring Georgia delegate in a seersucker suit to call himself a dry.

If prohibition had banished the Demon Rum for all time we can understand why the drys should fight against a wet plank, but what on earth do they see in the smuggler, the bootlegger, the hi-jacker, the corrupted public official and the gangster with his beer racket?

Brother Bryan, of Nebraska, is going to miss this convention, but this convention isn't going to miss Charlie.

Houston, Tex., June 25.—Smith and Robinson.

This is the Democratic national ticket forecast tonight in the light of the prevailing sentiment of the leaders on the eve of the assembling of the Democratic national convention tomorrow.

With the nomination of Gov. Smith, of New York, for President, almost universally conceded even among his opponents, interest has veered to the selection of his running mate.

A striking development of the day was the spread of sentiment in favor of the nomination of Senator Joe T. Robinson, of Arkansas, for Vice President. There is every indication tonight that he appeals more strongly to all elements of the party than does any other aspirant to the honor.

Whether he is acceptable to Smith is not known and Smith, it is generally assumed, will do the choosing of his running mate. Robinson, however, has commended himself strongly to the Smith leaders by his action yesterday in withdrawing as a favorite son entry in the presidential contest and releasing the Arkansas delegation to vote as it sees fit, which will be for Smith. More than any other individual Robinson, by that action, started the bandwagon movement in favor of Smith.

Is Both West and South. The Smith managers are torn between the middle West and the South in the selection of the vice presidential candidate. Robinson hails from a State that is both West and South. He is a dry, but not too dry to suit the Eastern wets. As a supporter of the McNary-Haugen bill and leader of the effort to pass the measure over the veto he qualifies as a westerner.

But what commends Robinson particularly to the consideration of the Smith following is his qualifications to hold the Protestant Democrats in line for Smith through a vigorous stump-speaking campaign.

Robinson is a member of the Federal Council of Churches, the powerful propaganda organization of the Protestant sects, representing 22,000,000 church members. The Smith leaders, who, together with the New York Governor himself, will pick the vice presidential candidate, are by no means, however, a unit in favoring Robinson. There was considerable discussion among them today of the qualifications of Senator Barkley, of Kentucky; Representative Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, and Evans Woolen, of Indiana.

Tide Turns to Smith. So far as the presidential nomination is concerned the day was a succession of bandwagon developments insuring the nomination of Al Smith not later than the second ballot. In fact, it now appears doubtful that the nomination can be delayed until the roll is called a second time. So eager are the bandwagon jumpers to get themselves enrolled for Smith that they will be restrained with difficulty from throwing all previous pledges to the winds and plumping for Smith on the first ballot.

The Smith managers still maintain that they do not want their man named on the first ballot. They insist that he is not careful.

As evidence that there is no playing about the prohibition attitude, though, is the very significant editorial in Jesse Jones' Houston Chronicle today. It was prompted by the irresponsible threats from the Eastern camp, not the inner Smith camp, that the platform must be wet. "Now look here," the editorial in Mr. Jones' paper said, not in exactly these words but in substance. "You've been telling us all along that the nomination of Smith did not mean a wet regime. We have come fairly well to accept him on that. But don't think you now have the South by the throat. Try to tamper with prohibition and you will see that both you scold and this is a political condition and your calling us hypocrites and fanatics will not alter that."

This warning was not needed by the Smith camp, however. The Albany governor's managers are right in tune with the situation. There will be the law enforcement plank, with as much effect, it is confidently predicted, as that of the Republicans. And the Rev. E. C. Dinwiddie, chairman of the committee of 31 church and temperance organizations, says that this will be satisfactory. Mr. Dinwiddie says

FIGHT ON SMITH CONTINUES BUT FOES LACK A LEADER; BAND WAGON MOVE GROWS

CLAUDE G. BOWERS.

Tammany, Victory in View, Is Humoring "Home Boys"

New Yorkers Insist Favorite Sons Get Votes on First Ballot; Lonely Figure of Reed Contrasted With Wild Acclaim for Mrs. Wilson.

By CARLISLE BARGERON (Staff Correspondent of The Post).

Houston, Tex., June 25.—The home boys, Gov. Moody and the rest of them, are "sho' cuttin' up" down here, but the big, red-necked cowman from the Texas Panhandle who goes around the streets playing "The Sidewalks of New York" on a mouth organ must be right smart, because he has the real motif of this convention—harmony with Smith and a strong law-enforcement plank at the end of it all. The Eastern city slickers are letting the home boys cut up, too, because beneath their political breasts beats a sympathetic understanding of their plight.

The Smith managers are fighting to hold off a first-ballot nomination rather than seeking one.

"None of that," they say to the ambitious Ohioans who come rushing in late clamoring. "Say, what's this we hear about the first ballot stuff. If so we want to get in on it."

"Go ahead and vote for Pomerene on the first ballot," was the reply.

With the nomination in its pocket, Tammany wants the home boys first to strut their stuff so that in the end an appreciative understanding may be born of all the political men who have such diverse and conflicting constituencies.

But in fairness, the home boys mean their talk about prohibition, although not enough of them to amount to anything are quite serious when they add "we will not take Smith." When there is a close study of their words, as a matter of fact few of them add this Smith inhibition, but in their high-sounding phrases about prohibition, one may get the impression of a terrific development of Smith opposition if he is not careful.

As evidence that there is no playing about the prohibition attitude, though, is the very significant editorial in Jesse Jones' Houston Chronicle today. It was prompted by the irresponsible threats from the Eastern camp, not the inner Smith camp, that the platform must be wet. "Now look here," the editorial in Mr. Jones' paper said, not in exactly these words but in substance. Cry Is for Dry Nominee and Dry Plank but Unity Is Lacking.

RUSH TO NEW YORKER IMPERILS OWN PLANS

All Candidates Should Receive Complimentary Votes at Start, Governor Holds.

By JAMES L. WILLIAMS. (Associated Press Staff Writer).

Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.)—The Democratic presidential nomination lay just around the corner tonight for Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York.

Meeting here to choose its standard bearer, the party's national convention will get together tomorrow at noon with a greater number of delegates committed to one man than at any time since 1916, when Woodrow Wilson was named by acclamation.

An insistent minority was doing battle against the New York governor tonight, but it was not a coordinated force. Its cry was for a dry candidate and a dry platform, but where the Smith ranks were solid for their man the minority group apparently had been unable to settle upon a unity of command or upon a leader for whom to wage its warfare. The purpose was to defeat Smith and to most of the delegates who came to Houston to prime the party for the 1928 campaign that seemed to be a forlorn hope.

Smith Forces Serene. The serenity with which the Smith forces faced the issue contrasted sharply with the bustling manner in which the opposition workers dashed about in the hot Texas sun today in their efforts to line up and hold one-third of the convention votes necessary to prevent the nomination of the man they had grouped against.

Smith managers even sent forth word that their main worry was to prevent his selection on the first ballot. This strategy, it was explained, was designed to prevent winners which might be inflicted on favorite sons who failed to receive their complimentary vote from the convention.

But, with signs of discouragement visible to them on every hand, the anti-Smith group were fighting for Hull, for George, for Reed, and for any one else whom it thought might muster the strength to prevent the elevation of the New York Governor to the party leadership. Their one slogan was "Prohibition."

Aiding the dry delegates with prayer meetings, with personal appeals, with literature and with enthusiasm were hundreds of friends of the dry law, including a large number of women, who pleaded earnestly that the Democratic party turn aside to some other than Smith. These workers refused doggedly to admit that their cause was lost.

Differences Over Planks. With the wet and dry fight crowding their presidential race closely for first place in public interest, the party leaders continued their efforts to smooth out before the convention resolutions committee the differences of opinion within the various delegations over the form of a prohibition plank in the party platform. The probable success or failure of these efforts for the moment crowded into the background the speculation over what the convention would do about the farm relief issue which also gave promise of becoming a leading issue.

There were three lines of thought over prohibition—one group wanted a plank naming the eighteenth amendment as a part of the Constitution, which should be rigidly enforced; a second believed the party should call for the enforcement of all laws without specifying any one particular statute; a third asked that the Volstead act be modified.

To the political gossamers a choice subject was the attitude Gov. Smith might take in the event the eighteenth amendment was singled out for especial attention. The Smith supporters, however, appeared to be unworried by this phase of the situation which had developed in Houston.

Roosevelt Field General. It was definitely determined today that Franklin D. Roosevelt would place Gov. Smith in nomination and in addition would be the Smith field general during the convention. The dry and anti-Smith forces continued to look to Dan Moody of Texas to lead them on the floor. Moody's arrival here gave impetus to the dry crusade, and many of the delegates have already made him the unofficial generalissimo for their cause.

The Houston convention gave unmistakable signs tonight of being a colorful one, regardless of whether the balloting is prolonged. The cool of the evening, beginning tomorrow night at 7 o'clock, was picked as the time for the temporary chairmanship of Claude G. Bowers, editorial writer for the New York Evening World, to sound the key-note for the Democratic campaign. This will provide a night show in the beginning and will enable millions of radio listeners to sit comfortably in their homes to hear the keynotes to the convention.

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, June 25 (A.P.)—A second member of the crew of the ill-fated Italia has been rescued tonight by airplanes but four others and the crew of a wrecked Swedish airplane were still marooned on an ice cake, awaiting succor.

Meanwhile elsewhere—somewhere on the broad Arctic spaces still are sixteen other men of whom there has been no trace. They are the seven last heard of as with the remains of the Italia, the three who left Gen. Nobile afoot to find land, and the would-be rescuers, Roald Amundsen, Rene Guilbaud, Lief Dietrichsen and their plane's crew of three.

Following upon the removal of Gen. Umberto Nobile from the ice cake near Foy Island Saturday, the motor chief of the Italia, Natale Ceccione, has been rescued and, presumably, taken to the base ship Clitta di Milano now at Virgo Bay, 60 miles north of here.

National Committee Puts Six
Smith Votes From Canal
on Temporary Roll.

Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.)—Six Smith-instructed delegates to the Democratic national convention from the Canal Zone were placed on the temporary roll by the Democratic national committee today, but another contest—one from Louisiana involving twenty votes claimed by Smith—was referred to the convention credentials committee without recommendation.

The Louisiana fight was the most spectacular of the four contests brought before the committee, and gave members opposed to and in favor of Gov. Smith's candidacy an opportunity to argue against each other.

One of those who took a leading part in the fight against seating the Smith delegates from Louisiana was Senator Carter Glass, the national committee man from Virginia, who has been an avowed opponent of Smith. He characterized the selection of the regular slate from the Delta State, headed by Gov. Long and Senators Broussard and Randall, as "fraudulent and by a usurpation of power."

In the opinion of many committee members who heard him, Senator Glass virtually conceded the ultimate nomination of Gov. Smith when he spoke of the selection of the twenty Smith delegates.

Holds Votes Not Needed.

"The man who is to be nominated for President by this convention," he said, "does not need your 20 votes and I venture to say that he does not want your 20 tainted votes."

"Even were I a friend of the man who will inevitably be nominated, I should take the same position on this question that I now take."

The controversy in Louisiana is over the action of the State central committee in selecting 20 delegates and 20 alternates to the convention without calling a State convention, as had been the custom, the testimony brought out, for more than 40 years.

The contest came up under the leadership of Mrs. James M. Thompson, wife of the publisher of the New Orleans Item, a daughter of the late Champ Clark, whom Senator Reed supported for President, and a sister of one of the present Reed lieutenants. She was supported by Harry Campbell, of New Orleans, and Ferd Claiborne, of New Orleans.

The regular delegation, which under the unit rule, will vote for Smith, put its position before the committee through Col. Robert Ewing, national committeeman-elect.

Under the Louisiana law, the testimony disclosed, the State central committee is given certain broad powers with respect to national affairs. The law does not specifically provide for the selection of national convention delegates, but the testimony showed that for many years they were selected by a State convention. The Ewing group argued that the central committee was wholly within its right in itself naming the delegates. The opposing group charged fraud because custom had been ignored.

Among those who appealed for the seating of the Smith people was Arthur Mullen, national committeeman for Nebraska, a State which is instructed to vote for Gilbert M. Hitchcock for the presidential nomination.

Only one roll call vote was taken during the hearings, that in connection with the seating of the Canal Zone delegates. The forces supporting Mrs. L. O. Keen, national committeewoman, and her Smith-instructed delegation, registered 76 votes as against 14 for the group supporting the uninstructed and Reed-inclined slate headed by National Committeeman Frank T. Hamlin.

The other two contests involving six delegates from the District of Columbia and three from Pennsylvania reflected no political significance since both contesting groups are Smith instructed or claimed. The District of Columbia contest was decided by Harry Campbell, National Committeeman Costello, and that from Pennsylvania in favor of three Philadelphia delegates selected on the regular Keystone State convention ticket.

Alabama to Yield on Roll;
George's Name Up First

Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.)—Alabama, in caucus late today, yielded to Georgia on the nominating roll call, thus affording the Georgians opportunity to nominate United States Senator Walter F. George as the first candidate to be presented to the convention.

CORN BELT REVOLT PARTY'S BEST BET, WESTERNERS HOLD

Arrival of Delegates Puts Farm Plank in Center of Activities.

KANSAS CITY VIEWED AS SCENE OF DEFEAT

Political Leaders, Not Agriculturalists, Demanding Action in Houston.

Special to The Washington Post.
Houston, Tex., June 25.—Western delegations, arriving in Houston today, filled the air with shouts that the corn belt revolt is one of the greatest campaign assets the Democratic party has for next November.

The "farm plank" became the center of activities. Here the party leaders are doing the talking instead of the farm organization leaders, as at Kansas City. The uprisers say the corn belt is being invited almost to write its own ticket. Informal conferences and table chatter all day long has taken a trend favoring a plank pledging the following:

1. A special session of Congress in March to put through farm relief.

2. Passage of legislation that will give the farmer economic parity with other industries.

Tentative drafts have been prepared, a dozen and more of them. Senator Robert F. Wagner, New York, intimate friend of Gov. Al Smith, has a draft of one. Both New York senators, Wagner and Copeland, voted for the McNary-Haugen bill and so did most of the Tammany delegation in the lower house.

Views to Be Considered.

As viewed in the inner circles, the farm plank must be satisfactory to the corn belt, as at Kansas City. The uprisers say the corn belt is being invited almost to write its own ticket. Informal conferences and table chatter all day long has taken a trend favoring a plank pledging the following:

Many Evidences Develop
That Some From Doubtful
States Want Modification.

Sisters Oppose Each Other in Contest for Places on

By MARY BAINBRIDGE HAYDEN
(Associated Press Staff Writer).
Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.)—In the sweltering jam of Houston corridors and streets today, as the crowds of late arrivals streamed in, "dry" women persisted in their public demonstrations, and in some doubtful State delegations women still asked for a dry plank. But there were many evidences, especially among the voting delegates, of a feminine swing to support the majority candidate's stand on enforcement.

"Ninety-eight per cent of Texas women are anti-Smith and for strict prohibition," declared Mrs. J. T. Bloodworth, national committeewoman from Texas, ticketing ten of the thirteen Lone Star women delegates as "absolute dry."

"Mississippi was the first State to ratify the eighteenth amendment, and is still dry," commented Mrs. Daisy McLaurin Stevens, Mississippi national committeewoman and daughter of its former governor and senator.

Mrs. Scott Lutton, Virginia's only woman district delegate, said that, although the women she represents are dry, she is inclined for Smith.

"Virginia women hope that whoever the nominee is, he can stand on an enforcement plank," she said.

Fears Break in Party.

There is still some talk of a break in the Democratic women's vote in November if a wet candidate is nominated.

"I rather believe that women put the general welfare of the country above party lines and will vote for a Democratic victory at the expense of anything they consider as affecting party standards," said Mrs. Frank Mann, national committeewoman delegate at large from West Virginia.

At the breakfast for the national women's committee for law enforcement, however, while speakers openly threatened "a split in the party" if a wet candidate is nominated, Smith delegates present protested against every threat.

"I am a wet, and I don't believe in any dry plank," audibly commented Mrs. Julia Hurd, delegate at large from Washington State.

"We are a border State, and enforcement is a real issue with us," added her associate delegate at large, Dr. Margaret Burger. "Enforcement has been so poor that women who were dry are turning to ask for something that will be really effective."

Letting others argue the pros and cons of dryness, some women at the convention are putting their support of a favorite candidate above any plank.

AL SMITH MANAGER MAKES CHOICES FOR COMMITTEE POSTS

Van Namee "Guesses" Senator Wagner Will Serve on Resolutions Body.

MAYOR WALKER GIVEN
ENTHUSIASTIC GREETING

Maryland Delegates Wear
Ritchie Badges but Root for New Yorker.

By BRIAN BELL
(Associated Press Staff Writer).
Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.).—Before the New York delegation held its first formal meeting late tonight, George R. Van Namee, manager of Gov. Smith's pre-convention activities, made some guesses as to the committee appointments to be authorized by the delegation.

He "assumed" that Senator Robert F. Wagner would serve on the resolutions committee, Mayor James J. Walker on the rules committee, and John J. Fitzgerald, former representative in Congress, on credentials. All of Mr. Van Namee's previous assumptions have been borne out by developments.

The director of the pre-convention activities in behalf of Mr. Smith thought it quite likely that Mrs. Caroline O'Day, of New York, who was chairman of the delegation four years ago, would serve again in that capacity. Earlier in the day he had announced that Franklin D. Roosevelt would be the Smith floor manager.

Mayor James J. Walker came to the convention city today to be greeted by a great crowd at the railway station, many yelling, "Hey Jimmy" and "This Jimmy." There is no "Mayor Walker" in Houston. He seems to be generally known by what Gov. Smith calls his "front name."

Smith Headquarters Crowded.
The mayor was practically silent. "I have come to the convention as a delegate from New York," he said, "hoping that the convention will do what is best for the party. It is not necessary for me to say what nomination for President I think is best for the party."

Mayor Walker fell into step with the other prominent New York Democrats, declining to make any predictions as to when Gov. Smith would be nominated. "I have no plans to issue a statement," he said, "and I have issued none."

Members of Gov. Smith's immediate family reached Houston today, but declined to be interviewed. The day also brought several hundred other New Yorkers, all claiming to be confident that the result will be "Smith on an easy basis."

Smith headquarters presented a crowded appearance during the last day before the opening of the convention, although the headquarters consists of four big hotel parlors. The Western States Smith-for-President Association received during the day in one room. New Jersey delegates caused in another and a third was used as headquarters for Maryland and Gov. Ritchie. The Maryland delegates wore their Ritchie badges, bearing a likeness of the Maryland Governor, although he has announced his withdrawal from the race for the nomination. However, the delegates talked of Smith as they wore the Ritchie badges.

New Englanders Arrive.
A New England train brought several hundred delegates and convention visitors to Houston today. Many of them had their Smith insignia on when they arrived and others were soon supplied at the Smith rallying place.

The day passed without a parade although it seemed for a time that the edict of "no demonstrations" from Van Namee and his associates was about to go by the board. The New Englanders had a number of banners in their luggage on which enthusiastic endorsement of Smith appeared but while some were unfurled before the hotel it was not organized sufficiently to call it a parade. There was a rush for a window when the word passed that a parade was going by and there was frank relief when the paraders were found to be cowboys and cowgirls.

F. D. Roosevelt Appointed
Floor Manager for Smith

Houston, June 25 (A.P.).—Franklin D. Roosevelt, candidate for the Vice Presidency eight years ago, today was named by George R. Van Namee, manager of Gov. Smith's pre-convention activities, to act as floor leader for the Smith forces in the convention.

Mr. Roosevelt, who lives at Hyde Park, Dutchess County, N. Y., will place the New York governor in nomination a function he performed four years ago. Mr. Van Namee also announced today that "United States Senator Robert F. Wagner had been named an alternate delegate at large to replace Lieut. Gov. Edwin Corning, prevented by sickness from attending the convention."

Questioned as to the governor's strength on the first ballot, Van Namee said "more than 650, and more and more."

He said he thought it safe to say the Democratic platform would be "much shorter" than the Republican platform.

Mr. Van Namee repeated former statements that New York has no candidate for Vice President. "Those here from New York with a semblance of authority" "nearly open-minded on the subject of vice presidential candidates," he said.

Houston Herd of 48 Barrows
Increases; 1 for Nominee

Houston, June 25 (A.P.).—Mother Nature has upset the plans of the convention committee that brought 48 Texas barrows to town to represent each State delegation. When the keeper opened the stables this morning he was surprised to see that his herd had increased to 49.

Then the question arose as to what to do with this small, long-eared placid creature that looked over the convention city with a blasé stare. The committee went into consultation and decided to charter the intruder "Baby Houston" and present it to the presidential nominee.

Vote on Casting Ballot
Deferred by Oklahoma

Houston, June 25 (A.P.).—Oklahoma, one of the States in dispute between Al Smith and Senator Reed, decided today to delay until Wednesday morning a vote on how it will cast its twenty votes for President. The unit rule prevails in the delegation and both sides were claiming a majority tonight.

Aggravated Citizens Are Killed.
Mexico City, June 25 (A.P.).—Dispatches from Ixtlahuaca, state of Mexico, today said two rival groups of agrarians clashed at the town of San-El-Yeche. Four persons were killed and several wounded.

Upshaw Candidacy Again Made Possible

Atlanta, Ga., June 25 (A.P.).—William D. Upshaw's candidacy for Congress, questioned by officials of the Fifth Congressional District, because of his failure to qualify under rules effective for more than fifteen years, became valid today when Representative L. J. Steel, his opponent, waived any technical objections.

Mr. Upshaw's entrance fee for the September primary was paid by friends and notice of his candidacy filed with the county chairman, but no formal announcement was filed with the secretary of the district committee as provided by the rules.

Hearst Indorses Berry For the Vice Presidency

Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.).—Headquarters for the vice presidential movement on behalf of George L. Berry, president of the International Pressmen, today made public a message from William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, declaring the Democrats should take notice of "Mal Berry" if they are considering "ability and availability" of candidates.

The message, addressed to William H. McHugh, described Berry as "very popular both with the union men and the publishers of America."

Antis Hold Secret Meeting.

ANTISMITH FORCES STILL MAKING FIGHT, ON MOUNTING ODDS

Reed and Dry South Coalition
Refuses to Admit It Can Not Stop Governor.

SENATOR WOULD MAKE
APPEAL TO FARMERS

Roper Works in Dark to Keep Delegates in Line in Face of Rumored Defections.

Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.).—In the face of mounting odds, the anti-Smith folks—"Jim" Reed's Missourians and the dregs of the South—fought steadily on today to gain that vital one-third-367 votes—necessary to halt Smith.

In his quarters high up in the Rice Hotel above the seething mob of incoming delegates, Senator Reed stuck by his drive for the presidential nomination, preparing another statement, this one dealing with the farm situation, and voicing encouragement to the steady line of friends who came to him through the day.

Down Main street, Daniel C. Roper, of South Carolina, spokesman of the Southern anti-Smith, anti-Tammany faction, was busy in the Lamar Hotel dispatching couriers to the delegations he hopes to hold in line and later today he called into session his "steering committee."

Switches to Smith Rumored.
Word of probable defections in the ranks of the "outsiders" in favor of Smith, particularly in Ohio and possibly in Indiana, only served to spur on the drive and as the hot Texas sun was sinking today there was no sign of a halt in the drive against the New York governor.

Particular interest for the afternoon centered in the Kansas and Oklahoma delegations from whose folks the word slipped out early today that a "break" for Smith was in sight.

There was no doubt but that the prohibition pronouncement yesterday by the Missouri senator had proved the basis for a working agreement between the dry South and Reed's men. However, both sides stoutly denied any coalition. Reed again sent word to his men that he was not fighting any particular candidate. All knew, however, that he had to fight Smith if he was to win, but it was emphasized that Reed was not opposing Smith because he was Smith—the attitude very clearly taken by the Southerners under Roper.

Roper and his men were still working under cover during the day. There were no indications from them as to who constituted their "steering committee" or what their "course of procedure" was. Last night Mr. Roper announced that the "elements" opposed to "nullification" of the eighteenth amendment and to Tammany today made public a message from William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, declaring the Democrats should take notice of "Mal Berry" if they are considering "ability and availability" of candidates.

The message, addressed to William H. McHugh, described Berry as "very popular both with the union men and the publishers of America."

Senators from Texas, today described Alfred E. Smith as "the outspoken choice of the majority of the Democrats at this convention and the entire country," and advocated his nomination on an early ballot.

The Owsley declaration, coming in the midst of his campaign for the senatorial nomination, led to speculation as to whether an effect would be shown in the Texas delegation. The 40 convention votes from this State are unpledged, but a caucus is to be held tonight at which a preference vote is expected to be taken. A majority of the votes will decide how the entire 40 are to be cast.

There is some talk also of a contest being made against the Arkansas delegation should it show its hand for Smith. This contest, it is said, would be based on the same ground as that being waged against the Louisiana delegation, selection by State committee.

SMITH PICTURES SELF AS POLITICAL WARRIOR

Worthwhile Things Not Had Without Fighting, He Tells Graduates.

GIVES DIPLOMA TO SON

Albany, N. Y., June 25 (A.P.).—On the eve of the Democratic convention which his supporters are confident will nominate him for the Presidency, Gov. Alfred E. Smith pictured himself in an address today as a political warrior in whose nostrils the scent of battle is always sweet.

"Never take it easy in life," he told the graduating class at the Academy of the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, the class of which his youngest son, Walter, was president. "Nobody ever got anywhere without working for it, and if they did they found it wasn't worth while. If I hadn't had to run for it I would have quit the governorship after the second time."

The governor made no reference to current political matters nor to his own prospects, a subject on which he has declined to talk in his daily meetings with newspaper men. He told reporters today that he wasn't going to say anything of political import and all they could write about him was what he was doing.

"And what are you doing?" one reporter asked.

"Nothing," the governor replied, with a grin.

Sitting in a red leather chair at the front of the academy's crowded auditorium he impartially applauded three girls and three boy orators and then moved to a chair on the stage beside Bishop Gibbons for the awarding of diplomas.

As each of the 47 members of the class received a diploma the student would kneel on a hassock before the bishop and kiss the great king on the third finger of his right hand. When young Smith's name was called, however, the bishop handed the diploma to Gov. Smith. Father and son grinned at each other as the governor handed the 17-year-old boy his certificate.

Walter Smith then kissed the bishop's ring and took his place among his fellow students. A strong plank on taxation also is in the making with those drafting it determined to assail the taxation policies of the Republican administration and denouncing the Mellon tax program as not based upon the fundamental principle of ability to pay.

Klan Quarters at Houston;
"Onlookers," It Is Stated

Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.).—The Ku Klux Klan has opened quarters at the Milby Hotel across the street from the Rice Hotel, where the presidential candidates have headquarters.

Aids said that Hiram Evans, the imperial wizard, was on the ground himself, but that he was not taking an active part in convention proceedings. "We are here simply as onlookers," one of the aids said.

Mr. Evans was reported "in conference." Later he authorized a statement that the Klan was working in Houston for a very plank in the platform and was taking no part in the contest over nominees.

LATIN-AMERICAN PARLEY PLANK PUT FORWARD

Would Make U. S. Intervention
Subject to Discussion
With Other Lands.

FIRM TAX CLAUSE SEEN

Houston, June 25 (A.P.).—While prohibition and farm relief held the center of public attention today, serious study was being given by the platform builders to a number of other subjects. Corruption is to be emphasized as the dominant issue of the campaign. It is expected that this plank will review the oil lease "scandal" under the Harding administration and pledge the Democratic party to clean government.

A plank dealing with campaign contributions and expenditures has been put into tentative form and will receive the careful attention of the resolutions committee. It will urge revision of the corrupt practices act.

The Republican administration's foreign policy will be roundly scored by the Democratic platform, which is expected to be probably the shortest one within recent years, perhaps less than 5,000 words, as compared with the usual 10,000 words or more.

In connection with the foreign policy study is being given to the platform pledging the party if placed in power to intervene in other American republics for police purposes only after a discussion of the disorders of a conference of the Latin-American republics. Reference would be made to the A. B. C. conference during the Wilson administration for adjustment of difficulties with Mexico.

Information today was that the tariff plank would propose no sweeping downward revision of import rates, but would denounce the Fordney-McCumber law now in force as inequitable and tending to foster the growth of monopolies. This provision probably will follow closely that of 1924, which declared for a tariff on commodities entering customs houses which would promote effective competition, protect against monopoly and produce a fair revenue for the Government.

A strong plank on taxation also is in the making with those drafting it determined to assail the taxation policies of the Republican administration and denouncing the Mellon tax program as not based upon the fundamental principle of ability to pay.

Gavel From Old Hickory's Home May Be Employed

Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.).—A gavel made from a hickory tree at Hermitage, Tenn., home of Andrew Jackson, may be used tomorrow in calling the Democratic convention to order.

The gavel was brought here today by Representative Joseph Byrns, of Tennessee, at the request of Mrs. James P. Fraser, of Nashville, president of the Ladies' Hermitage Association. Byrns said he hoped to prevail upon convention officials to use the gavel for the first call to order.

James O. "Old Hickory" was himself nominated for the presidency a century ago this year.

RITCHIE AND MOODY PROHIBITION PLANKS SHOW WIDE DIVISION

Governor of Maryland Would Have Party Base Issue on States' Rights.

TEXAS WILL DEMAND BONE DRY STATEMENT

Josephus Daniels Threatens Floor Fight If "Moist" Suggestion Is Made.

By ARTHUR CRAWFORD, Special to The Washington Post.

Houston, Tex., June 25.—Two Democratic governors looked horns today on the prohibition question. Gov. Albert Ritchie, of Maryland, took the wet side of the argument while Gov. Dan Moody, of Texas, championed the dry cause.

The Maryland executive, who was a favorite son presidential candidate up to the time of his recent withdrawal in favor of Gov. Al Smith, made public a home rule wet plank which will be submitted to the convention resolutions committee by Senator Tydings, the Maryland member.

Then the young Texas governor, barely 35 years old, issued a statement announcing his intention as the Texas member of the resolutions committee to present a dry plank which not only will declare for enforcement but will oppose repeal or modification of prohibition laws or the eighteenth amendment.

The Ritchie and Moody planks are expected to represent the extremes of the prohibition controversy in the resolutions committee. Senator Wagner, the New York member of the resolutions committee may favor either the Maryland wet plank or the Illinois wet plank to be offered by Michael J. Ryan, and in the event of the rejection of both of them, will turn to a law enforcement plank which is general enough in its terms to suit Gov. Smith. The Ritchie plank goes further than the Illinois plank in that it favors State control of the prohibition question.

Text of Ritchie Plank.

The plank is known to be in complete harmony with the views of Gov. Smith, although it is the understanding that his friends are willing to accept a milder declaration in order to antagonize the dries in the party. The text of the Ritchie plank follows: "The fundamental principle of the Democratic party has always been that over-centralization of power in the Federal authorities and Federal invasion of the rights of local self-government reserved to the States is contrary to the spirit of our institutions and destructive of the liberties of our people."

The eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act constitute a departure from this principle. As long as the eighteenth amendment is part of the Constitution we recognize that it should be upheld and respected, but we are forced to realize that the Volstead act has not attained and can not attain the ends sought by it, and has caused a disregard of law and order and a condition of actual lawlessness and social and political demoralization that are dangerous to the country.

"We, therefore, ask that appropriate steps should be taken by Congress to have the prohibition turned back to the States so that each State within Constitutional limitations and under the principles of local option and home rule may have the opportunity of settling it in accordance with the will of its own people, and in this connection we favor also the enactment by Congress of such measures as may be necessary to prevent shipments into any State which might contravene the expressed will of the people of that State."

Affirms States Rights.

In effect the Ritchie plank is a denunciation of prohibition and also carries out the States rights principles which Gov. Ritchie has emphasized in numerous addresses.

It is in no way in conflict with the Illinois wet plank, but the latter, besides declaring for law enforcement in general and denouncing the use of crime in enforcement of the prohibition law, merely affirms the right of citizens to petition Congress for repeal or modification of oppressive laws or Constitutional provisions. Gov. Moody indicated by his statement that he desires a dry plank even stronger than that of the Republican platform.

"The resolution adopted at the Texas State convention instructed in favor of a plank for the national platform unequivocally endorsing the eighteenth amendment and declaring opposition of any attempt to repeal it or to destroy the prohibition laws," said Gov. Moody. "It further instructed in favor of promising the faithful, strict and efficient enforcement of the prohibition laws and all other laws, I am confident that such a plan will be offered at this convention and that it will be supported by Texas Democrats."

"The serious thought of the South is in favor of prohibition and its enforcement and, in my judgment, if any improvements are to be made in the prohibition laws, these improvements should be made for the friends of prohibition and no attempt on the part of enemies of prohibition to emasculate the laws can be tolerated."

Warns of "Overdraft."

"I do not believe that the delegates from other sections of the country will be controlled by the environs of the few places in this Nation that are opposed to prohibition, but it is my judgment that they will recognize the serious thought of the South wherein is the heart and soul of the Democratic party. No attempt should be made to draw an overdraft on the Democratic loyalty of the South."

The Georgia delegation approved a dry plank which will be offered by Edward Maddox, its resolutions committee member.

Text of the Georgia plank follows: "We hereby reaffirm our allegiance to the principle as stated in the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution which was proposed and enacted under the Democratic administration. "We not only oppose any effort looking to repeal or modification thereof, or of the laws which have been enacted in pursuance thereof, but urge the making of such appropriations and the passage of such administrative laws as may be necessary for the enforcement of the said amendment according to its true spirit and intent."

Former Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, who will be the North Carolina member of the resolutions committee, also announced his intention to urge approval of a bone dry plank.

"Unless the party stands by the enforcement laws it can not be successful," said Mr. Daniels. "If the Smith people attempt to put through a moist or damp plank we will fight to the last ditch in the committee and on the floor of the convention. The South will go Republican if Smith should run on a wet plank."

ASPIRANT AND HIS BACKER

Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, left, and Charles M. Howell, Kansas City attorney, who will place Senator Reed's name in nomination at the convention at Houston.

Smith Campaign of Quiet Is Making Reed Unhappy

Fighting Missourian Forced to Shadow Boxing by Olvany's Ban on Brag, Bluster and Noise; Sitting Tight New Yorkers Gather Votes.

Special to The Washington Post.

Houston, Tex., June 25.—You would hardly believe your ears could you listen on this tropic scene to the new Al Smith note.

It is the note of subdued geniality. It can be authoritatively defined in these words, which come from high places:

"Mind the lessons of Madison Square and don't be excessive."

"Don't play the big boy."

"Don't tell anybody you have him whipped."

"Don't carry ammunition to Jim Reed by contradicting him about anything."

"If any fool makes to you a proposition about mechanical noisemakers to be used in a Smith demonstration on the floor of the convention, you run from that man."

"Say nothing that will start recriminations."

"As to farm relief, add a chip or two to all that the Republican platform has promised."

"And, as to 'The Sidewalks of New York,' forget both words and music."

The principal source of these admonitions is George Olvany, Gov. Smith's first lieutenant in Houston.

The new Smith note has made Reed, of Missouri, unhappy. Reed loves to fight, but he loves also to have something to fight.

This suave system of Olvany's has reduced Reed to shadow-boxing. That winds and tires him—and nothing comes of it.

Olvany softly wisecracks hither and yon, and when put to question which he does not care to answer, releases Charlie Murphy's old formula, "The delegates will decide."

As to prohibition, Olvany's general speech is extraordinarily wise without being hatefully Machiavellian. He is saying here—and Albany is backing him up—"open debate on the floor of the convention and no attempt to shut it off. Their every dry delegate can go home and honestly say, 'I did the best I could.'"

The Smith people know that no eating of words at this hour, no tergiversations can make a dry candidate out of Al Smith. To constitutionalists on this scene they quote the governor's words to the dry leaders of New York State, "You can have all the enforcement you are willing to pay for."

Their ideal of a prohibition plank for the platform is a plank which shall say, "Law enforcement—enforcement of all laws equally."

There are no secret places in the Smith headquarters here and no yodelling by the authentic Smith partisans. This evening they are counting a few more than 700 of the 733 votes necessary to nominate the governor.

Hence they do not sing. They only whisper, "Sit tight."

It is remarkable—and it is amusing—that the sole thing that gets on their nerves at this moment is an eruption of "The Sidewalks of New York" by vocalizers who mean well but have not yet got the hang of Judge Olvany's new system for the exploitation of Al Smith.

Texas' 40 Votes Pledged To Jones; Some Opposition

Houston, June 25 (A.P.).—The 40 Texas votes in the Democratic convention were pledged in caucus tonight to the presidential candidacy of Jesse H. Jones, of this city.

This action was taken by the delegation on a viva voce vote, in which several "nays" were heard. It had previously been expected that a record vote would be taken to show the sense of the delegation concerning the Smith candidacy.

Rudolph had also been heard that an attempt would be made to keep Gov. Moody from being elected to the platform committee, due to his extreme dry stand, but this did not develop and the young executive was ratified for the post.

The Texans are slated to support Jones as long as his name is before the convention and several in attendance at the caucus said another such meeting would be held before any change in this program would be made.

Wisconsin Talks Mitchell As Smith Running Mate

Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.).—Delegates from Wisconsin, who have 26 votes for Governor Smith discussed informally the advisability of placing the name of Col. William Mitchell, militant critic of the nation's aviation policy, in nomination for the vice presidency, upon their arrival today. No decision had been reached but a caucus was to be held Tuesday morning when it was expected the proposal would be considered.

The Badger delegates, who proposed Mitchell, whose legal residence is Milwaukee, as a favorite son candidate, contended such a move would be beneficial in the State campaign this fall. Mitchell is being boomed by some delegates as the Democratic gubernatorial nominee.

C. W. Bryan to Miss First Convention in 30 Years

Lincoln, Neb., June 25 (A.P.).—For the first time in 30 years Charles W. Bryan, of Lincoln, brother of the late William Jennings Bryan, and vice presidential candidate in 1924, plans to take no active part in the national Democratic convention this year. Mr. Bryan said today he did not plan to attend the convention at Houston, Tex., unless something unforeseen turned up. He plans to devote his time entirely to his campaign for Governor of Nebraska.

Philippine Independence Plank to Be Presented

Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.).—A move to obtain incorporation in the Democratic platform of a plank declaring for the complete independence of the Philippine Islands was initiated today by Commissioner Quevora, who represents the islands in Congress. He said that Senator King, of Utah, would present the plank to the convention and that the committee would lead the fight in behalf of its adoption.

MRS. SMITH ELUDES WELCOMERS AS SHE ARRIVES IN HOUSTON

"First Lady of Convention" Is There Merely as Spectator, She Insists.

COMMENT ON POLITICS STUDIOUSLY AVOIDED

Children and Friends Accompany Governor's Wife on Private Car.

Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.).—With the arrival of Mrs. Alfred E. Smith this afternoon, the New York delegation and the Smith headquarters at the Democratic convention have as guest the one they consider the "first lady of the convention."

But Mrs. Smith will disclaim all pretensions to the position and will keep herself in such retirement as the wife of the leading presidential candidate for the Democrats can.

She made a good start on her week of "being a mere unofficial but interested spectator," when her train arrived in Houston three-quarters of an hour early. She thereby eluded the very formal, very hot and very expectant welcoming delegation from the New York headquarters.

George Van Namee, in charge of the Smith headquarters, and his wife, who were to bring the greetings of the Houston Smithites to the New York Governor's wife, missed her and finally made connections only by racing to her five-room suite in a distant apartment hotel.

Mrs. Smith, gracious, but insisting that she was merely a spectator, said she was of interest to the public, slipped through the lines of idle spectators to the station and was piloted through the luncheon to a waiting car by train and railroad officials.

"Just wait a minute," she breathlessly requested the well wishers from her home State who were waiting to greet her at the hotel. "I want to wash my face. It is so hot here."

When she sat in state in her sitting room there were no traces of the long hot ride from New York. Her white chiffon frock splashed with large black dots seemed unsoiled, cool and comfortable.

She took off the white silk starched hat in which she had traveled and revealed her dark brown hair in perfect order, neatly arrayed close to her head under a hair net.

"Oh my, yes, I am glad to be here," she said. "But I am here only because I wanted to come and see the convention. Really, there is no politics in my mind."

She announced that she would accept only one of the many official invitations that had been tendered her, and confessed that she couldn't remember which one it was.

"I am not going to do a thing but go to the convention and listen to the proceedings there," she said.

"Then you aren't here as the presidential candidate's wife?" she was asked.

"Oh no, just to see what's all going on," she said.

Children With Her.

She fingered her crystal and jet beads nervously as her interviewers persisted in asking her what she thought of the outcome of the convention.

With Mrs. Smith were only two of her children, Katherine, a bride of two weeks, who came with her husband, Arthur and his wife, Mrs. John Warner, the former Emily Smith, who was to be a delegate from New York, was suffering from an attack of the grip, and was not able to leave her home in Albany. The youngest son, Walter, who was graduating from high school in Albany, stayed home with his father, while Alfred, Jr., was to arrive Tuesday morning.

"My every State where the Democrats had an opportunity to express their choice."

"I can not understand how any one can claim in the face of these facts," Senator Hefflin declared in the telegram, "that Gov. Smith would be a strong candidate."

The Alabama senator's telegram reiterated charges of a Roman Catholic political machine in the country, and centered his attack upon Smith on prohibition and the negro equality question. He declared that Gov. Smith's position of the negro problem was diametrically opposed to the position of "Democratic men and women of the South."

Arrives in Private Car.

Mrs. Glynn, whose husband is a retired police officer in New York City, said her two boys, John, Jr., and Edward, had already arrived in Houston and would be in daily attendance at the convention, though her husband was not able to make the trip.

The Smith family rode the trip in a private car, accompanied by two other cars containing various Tammany factotums, including William P. Kenny, James J. Riordan, J. F. Gilchrist, J. J. Raskob, Dr. Raymond P. Sullivan, George F. Geta, William H. Roy, Maurice Dobson and Edward Dowling.

Dr. Joseph Moskowitz, son of Mrs. Belle Moskowitz, ardent Al Smith worker in New York, was one of the few well-known who got to the station on time to welcome. He and the Old Gray Mare Band did their stuff while the party was being led from the train through the luncheon.

Katherine, very slim and very thrilled, not only over the trip but over the fact that this is the first year she has been able to vote for a President.

She looked tired after her trip, but smilingly posed for pictures with her mother and her husband, Francis J. Quillinan, a young New York lawyer whose Republican party affiliations do not prevent his taking an interest in the political destiny of his new father-in-law.

Hefflin Warns Alabama Delegates Against Smith

(Associated Press.)

Senator Hefflin, of Alabama, yesterday on the eve of the Democratic national convention, made an eleven-hour attack on the presidential candidacy of Gov. Smith of New York, declaring Smith's showing in the primaries did not mark him as a "strong candidate."

In a telegram to the Alabama delegation at Houston, made public here, Senator Hefflin said in the Northern and Western States where Smith won, not more than one-fourth of the Democratic voters went to the polls—"a very bad sign"—and in the South Smith "lost every State where the Democrats had an opportunity to express their choice."

"I can not understand how any one can claim in the face of these facts," Senator Hefflin declared in the telegram, "that Gov. Smith would be a strong candidate."

The Alabama senator's telegram reiterated charges of a Roman Catholic political machine in the country, and centered his attack upon Smith on prohibition and the negro equality question. He declared that Gov. Smith's position of the negro problem was diametrically opposed to the position of "Democratic men and women of the South."

Arrives in Private Car.

Mrs. Glynn, whose husband is a retired police officer in New York City, said her two boys, John, Jr., and Edward, had already arrived in Houston and would be in daily attendance at the convention, though her husband was not able to make the trip.

The Smith family rode the trip in a private car, accompanied by two other cars containing various Tammany factotums, including William P. Kenny, James J. Riordan, J. F. Gilchrist, J. J. Raskob, Dr. Raymond P. Sullivan, George F. Geta, William H. Roy, Maurice Dobson and Edward Dowling.

Dr. Joseph Moskowitz, son of Mrs. Belle Moskowitz, ardent Al Smith worker in New York, was one of the few well-known who got to the station on time to welcome. He and the Old Gray Mare Band did their stuff while the party was being led from the train through the luncheon.

Katherine, very slim and very thrilled, not only over the trip but over the fact that this is the first year she has been able to vote for a President.

She looked tired after her trip, but smilingly posed for pictures with her mother and her husband, Francis J. Quillinan, a young New York lawyer whose Republican party affiliations do not prevent his taking an interest in the political destiny of his new father-in-law.

Another social leader chooses Old Gold...when Mrs. Sidney Borg makes the Blindfold test

Mrs. Borg was asked to smoke each of the four leading brands, clearing her taste with coffee between smokes. Only one question was asked: "Which one do you like best?"

"The charitable activities in which I am engaged make it necessary for me to meet with women at all kinds of functions. I am often invited to smoke, but I smoke so little that my throat protests immediately unless the cigarette is very mild. So it was with particular delight that I discovered OLD GOLD in the blindfold test. I chose it at once...and from now on it will be my exclusive favorite."

Made from the heart-leaves of the tobacco plant

What is this quality that tells...even in the dark? OLD GOLD's honey-like smoothness...that's the net of it. But this cool and fragrant charm can come only from the heart-leaves of the tobacco plant. No heavy, coarse tobacco leaves...no withered ground-leaves. That's why OLD GOLDS are different...better...why you can pick them with your eyes closed.

THE MAN COUNTS.

The country awaits with the keenest interest the opening of the Houston convention. Republicans are watching the developments with anxiety, well knowing that if the Democratic party emerges from the convention with a ticket and a platform representing the best that is in the party there will be a strong tendency among independent voters to "make a change" in November.

How big is the independent vote? Nobody knows. It is made up of discontented former members of the old parties, and of young men and women voting for the first time. Party ties hold millions to the old trail, but other millions are yet to choose their path, and there is no reason for assuming that they will neglect their rights and duties as voters. Judging by the attitude of young men and women in business and society, they are apt to be very wide awake in political matters. New ideas in politics, reversals of old policies, and demands for a change are likely to appeal to these independent voters.

A great opportunity is open to the Democratic party. It has in sight a leader whose character has been tested and whose ability to win popular favor has rarely been equaled in American history. The great body of Democrats are not worrying over the quibbles of platform makers, knowing that if this leader should be placed in power his platform will be faithfulness to duty. They are hoping that the convention will keep in sight the main objective—the selection of a leader who has a chance to win. With a winner, the Democratic party can shape its policy on any question so as to hold public confidence; but without a winner all its declarations of policy will be in vain. It must have a leader whose character is an assurance that the Government would be safe in his hands. Policies can be adapted to the Nation's needs, but character can not be evolved by any committee on resolutions. The man, and not the platform, is what should concern the Democrats at Houston.

THE LEVIATHAN MYSTERY.

The great Leviathan mail robbery bids fair to go down in fiction. All the elements of romance are contained. Authorities both here and abroad are convinced of but one thing: the robbery apparently could not have been committed, and yet it was. Scotland Yard says that the mail sacks were rifled of some $500,000 before they left New York. New York postal inspectors, however, have looked into the matter carefully and say that the robbery must have been committed after the pouches were loaded upon boat trains for distribution in Great Britain. In the meantime the Leviathan has been turned about and is headed for New York. When she docks the American investigation will get under way in earnest.

As a general thing romance and mystery no longer surround crime. Frequently the police are reasonably certain as soon as a report of criminal activity has been received as to who is involved. The investigation then becomes mere routine, centering itself largely upon the discovery of evidence upon which suspects may be indicted. In the Leviathan robbery, however, old time mystery is revived.

European mail matter is handled in New York at the Varick street postal station in which several hundred clerks are on duty. Registered mail all is handled by at least two registry clerks, providing a double check. Armed guards are on duty at all times in the station and other armed guards escort the pouches from the station to the pier. Postal inspectors admit that a letter or two might be stolen at the Varick street station, but they say that hundreds of letters, as were involved in the Leviathan robbery, could not have been rifled without detection.

Scotland Yard points to the fact, however, that the mail pouches were received apparently intact with their seals unbroken. Furthermore, only bags originating in New York were disturbed, those from smaller postal stations in the United States coming through unharmed.

The Leviathan robbery apparently was executed to perfection. It will, in all probability, solved, perhaps not immediately, but certainly ultimately. The United States Postal Inspection Service has no less a reputation for getting its man than Scotland Yard. With both organizations at work to apprehend them those guilty of the Leviathan mail robbery should be quaking in their shoes.

NOBLE'S RESCUE.

In what is described as a "masterpiece of aviation," the Swedish flier, Lieut. Lundborg, dropped his three-motored monoplane Upland down beside the encampment of the Italian Arctic explorers, took aboard Gen. Umberto Nobile, and transported him back to civilization. On a second attempt, Lieut. Lundborg crashed his machine.

With the return of Nobile the rescue work in the Arctic is by no means concluded. There remain to be brought out his companions. There remain to be discovered, if possible, the balance of the crew of the Italia who were swept away in the gas bag after the gondola carrying Nobile had been torn loose. Three members of the gondola party have not been heard from since they started on foot to make their way to civilization. Interest now centers upon these others. Nobile was discovered and rescued, however, after he had been generally given up for lost, so hope runs high that the other members of the crew will be restored to the world.

Earlier in the season it appeared as though the mystery of the frozen North was about to be punctured. Wilkins and Ellsion had flown directly across the polar blind spot. Nobile had made several cruises over areas that never before had been seen by the eyes of civilized man. With dirigibles and airplanes it looked as though humanity would be able to cruise across hitherto impenetrable regions, photographing them and studying them until they were as well known as the land upon which civilization has flourished. Then the Italia disappeared. Immediately it was apparent that the Arctic still could be conquered only at the cost of hardship and danger.

Nobile's report, therefore, assumes major importance. What caused the Italia to crash? Was human judgment at fault or was there an unexpected meteorological disturbance? Will Nobile still be of the opinion that Arctic exploration by dirigible or plane can be made safe, or will he have come to believe that flying over the area above the Arctic Circle must always be spectacular? Not only from the exploration standpoint is Nobile's story of importance. The polar regions represent the shortest link between the Far East and certain parts of the Western Hemisphere. Some day, if Arctic flying is commercially feasible, there will be a network of air-lanes crossing polar regions.

IMPENDING COAL MERGER.

A secret meeting of West Virginia coal operators held in New York this week drew attention to the proposal to merge a number of the largest companies. The meeting was held to consider reports of engineers upon the value of the various companies involved. On the basis of these reports, it is said that a company with a capitalization in excess of $200,000,000 could justifiably be formed. This company would produce at least 35,000,000 tons of bituminous coal a year.

Merger of the West Virginia smokeless coal properties probably would be of benefit to the public. The project was born of a desire to eliminate wasteful competition and reduce operating and selling costs. Accomplishment of these ends should serve to reduce the price of coal. The point is bound to be raised, however, that the act of eliminating competition will react favorably upon the producer and adversely upon the public. Competition has helped to keep the price of coal at fairly reasonable levels. If competition is eliminated, it will be argued, operators may fix prices to serve their own purposes.

It was divulged after the New York meeting that the only objection raised against the engineers' valuation figures was that in respect to certain companies they were unfairly low. In such cases it was indicated that an attempt would be made to obtain higher appraisals. One operator pointed out, however, "that there was agreement that one thing to be avoided is overcapitalization," and that there was a feeling "that actual rather than potential values should be placed on all properties." The statement indicates that the merger is being formulated along proper lines. If the companies are sincere in desiring to establish a fair capitalization figure, and will be willing to earn no more than a fair return upon it, the price of coal would be lessened through a waste-eliminating merger.

The elimination of competition is not the major factor that it would have been formerly. Coal producers have had outside competition forced upon them of recent years of a much more serious sort than competition within the industry. The use of gas has become widespread. Oil burners have come into general popularity. In certain areas electricity has come to compete directly with coal. Gas, oil and electricity for heating and firing have points of superiority over coal. Thus far their greater cost has served to discourage their general adoption, but it is indicated that as time goes on the cost of gas, oil and electricity may be reduced. At any rate, gas, oil and electricity offer competition to coal even now in every respect except as to cost, and they undoubtedly will serve to make coal producers think twice before they permit the cost of their product to be increased.

It is general knowledge that a considerable part of the coal dollar is consumed by the cost of competition and distribution. Merger should effectively reduce these costs. Further progress toward this end will be awaited with interest, particularly if there is a prospect that retail prices will be reduced as a result.

THE NEW GOLF CHAMPION.

The rise of Johnny Farrell, who captured the open golf championship on Sunday by defeating Bobby Jones in the play-off, has been apparent during the last decade. Indeed, at the beginning of play at Olympia Fields he was described as an outstanding golfer, whom fortune had never favored in golf's big prize. It is, however, only necessary to look back over Farrell's record to see that he has been coming up all the time. His first effort in the open was in 1920. He could finish no better than in a tie for forty-first place, despite the fact that he shot a creditable 314. He improved steadily. By 1925 he was the runner-up. The following year he finished in third place. This year he has the title.

If anything, Farrell was under the greater strain during the play-off than his opponent. The open championship is worth a moderate fortune to a professional. The champion can capitalize his honor in all sorts of ways, all of them profitable. The realization of this fact is probably what stopped Roland Hancock when he had the title within his grasp. The honor of winning meant a good deal to Bobby Jones. It would have added to his record as the greatest golfer in the modern game, but the mental burden which the amateur shouldered was nowhere near as great as that of his rival.

The entire match hung on the last putt that Farrell had to make. So closely matched were he and Jones that on the final hole they would have been tied again if Farrell had failed to sink his long carry across the green. It was, as some descriptive writers said, a $50,000 putt. More ordinary golfers, who have become overwhelmed with nervousness at the thought that their putt would decide a trifling bet of a dollar or two, can probably realize that the putt meant a good deal to Farrell. That he was able to sink the ball under such circumstances is credit to his cool nerves and competitive heart. The victory of such a golfer can not help but be popular. The golfing world will wish the new king a most successful reign.

AN ERA OF OPULENCE.

With its population advancing at the rate of 50,000 a day, the world looks out upon the problem of its sustenance with an equanimity that none of the forebodings of the near-view critics can shake. During the last quarter of a century sane approach to the settlement of industrial situations and sound solution of economic problems have contributed to the doubling of the effective output of the worker in the United States. The effective output per capita today in mining, manufacture and transportation is, in fact, not far from 200 per cent of what it was a quarter of a century ago. Statistics record the most marvelous advance in provision of the materials for subsistence that any age has known. The part played by the United States is an epitome of what remains to be recorded in other countries whose resources have yet to be developed.

There is no limit to the market for things which satisfy human wants, and as the field of desire increases the efforts of providers are stimulated. The point of saturation may be reached in an industry or in a particular market, but even so, the frontiers of that industry are moving forward.

The basis of all production being land, of which there is no limit for all conceivable needs, the area of future production is ample. The story of the British Columbia wheat fields is a relatively recent one, and so with the Argentine cattle ranges. Areas of India are coming into utilization for modern agriculture through irrigation at the rate of millions of acres; China is discovering itself; Africa has only suggested to the world its potential contributions to the support of mankind, while Mexico and South America are rich in mineral and agricultural resources beyond estimation. The world prospect may be resolved into an outlook for the trade of the United States, which taps the world at every point of material development and contributes the capital and genius for much of its needs. There is no limit to the market for wares. Once backward peoples are now forward-looking, and every advance made by any considerable population is in the direction of increase of the production of goods, into which the enterprise of the United States enters with vigor and experience. This era of opulence for America, of enterprise and employment and intelligence, affords little encouragement for pessimism.

AN INCENTIVE TO GENIUS.

At the instance of Secretary of War Dwight Davis Congress, at its last session, enacted a statute safeguarding the patent rights of Government employees. Under the new law a patent may be issued to any Government employee provided only that use of his invention may be made by the Government without payment of royalties. Maj. Gen. George A. Squier, retired, former chief signal officer of the Army and widely known as an inventor of radio appliances and equipment, has addressed a letter to the Secretary of War commenting on the new law. The constructive thing that it has brought about, he said, is far more important than the right of any individual.

The important thing, as detailed in Gen. Squier's letter, is that "the best young inventive brains of the country will no longer shun the comparatively low salaries paid by the Government for scientific work." They will be attracted to the various Federal scientific laboratories in the knowledge that they will have satisfactory equipment with which to work, a living salary while they are experimenting, and full financial reward should their research and invention prove commercially valuable. Gen. Squier's letter contains the following paragraph:

This country's commercial supremacy is largely founded on the exclusive monopolies granted for a limited term of years to the inventive brains of its citizens so wisely provided for in the Constitution itself. In my judgment the new law will have a wholesome reaction upon the entire business management of this country and will serve as a model to commercial companies and corporations to stimulate the inventive genius of their employees in a manner suitable to their case.

It is to be hoped that the law will have this effect. The solicitation by business of employees' suggestions on a comprehensive scale, is a comparatively recent development. Wherever it has been put into effect it has quickly proved its value. It is not likely that the mere enactment of a new law will have much effect one way or another upon the policy of industrial and commercial organizations in this respect. If, however, the law will serve to attract young scientists to Government service in great numbers where they will produce valuable discoveries, industry may come to realize that it, too, would be benefited by stimulating further in every way possible inventive genius. The best way this can be done lies in making available scientific and laboratory equipment to young scientists, and guaranteeing them full financial reward for their work.

Prohibition, with which vanished the free lunch counter, dealt the pickle packing industry a smashing blow. For ten years the picklers have been operating far beneath full capacity. This year, however, at their annual convention in Chicago they reported that the pickle packing industry is on the mend, the explanation lying in the fact that ladies with whom silliness is a creed consume pickles in great quantities for the assistance they render in keeping down avoidups.

The Curtain Goes Up Today.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Traffic Hazards.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My experience during the last few days in trying to dodge autos at street intersections recalls vividly to my mind the situation of the colored man mentioned in an old plantation melody. Just what he was doing or why he is doing it is not mentioned in the song, nor are we told whether the couplet I shall quote was given as a command or as advice. Here it is:

"Turn about! Turn about, and do just so;

And every time you turn about, jump Jim Crow!"

Attempting to cross any street in the downtown section of the city the pedestrian is called upon to turn about—and turn about. After he has done that stunt three or four times to avoid autos going up or down the street he is crossing, he frequently finds he has to jump—and jump lively—to escape from some reckless driver making a right-hand turn. One of Dickens' characters, from the skill he had in escaping the police, was called the Artful Dodger. He might have been an artful and successful dodger in old London town, but he would be a goat on a Washington street when it came to dodging autos. I would like to see Henry Ford and a few other auto makers displaying their agility in dodging the infernal things. PEDESTRIAN.

Government Salaries.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Assuming that the decision as to the allocation of salaries of Federal employees under the recent act of Congress authorizing additional pay is from a legal standpoint correct, it is doubtful if Congress and the President, after collaboration, refused a flat increase of $300 to all, would intentionally agree to an act of unjust discrimination, giving those who have their shoulder to the wheel a raise of $60 per annum and the administrative force $800 per annum. It would be economical and advantageous to the Government to cut down at least 50 per cent of this force, many of them having lucrative outside interests, and consequently do not give their undivided attention to Government work. This lack of interest reflects on those who have the misfortune to be under them. In other words, the lack of interest is infectious, and the Government has to pay, or rather the people.

Honest Government employees, with their undivided interest in their work, should be paid salaries equal to those of private corporations for the same services. Loafers and those who have outside interests should be dealt with in a manner most advantageous to the Government.

While I do not feel competent to argue for or against the legal aspects of the decision, I do know that it has destroyed morale and caused a loss to the Government of untold thousands. J. C. LYONS.

Respect for the Flag.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the Sunday issue of The Post one of your correspondents appeared to be grieved because an audience in a movie did not break out in cheers when the flag was thrown on screen. If the people of Washington had to stop and applaud in some way every time they saw the flag, they would have little time for anything else. The flag is displayed everywhere, even on autos. In my judgment, we belittle the flag by such profuse display. The flag is the legitimate emblem of the dignity and authority of the Nation. It rightly floats over buildings occupied by the service of the Nation; over schoolhouses, because it is under the liberality of the Nation those schools exist. But its display everywhere and on all occasions belittles it. Only a few days ago a circus paraded our streets, the flag appearing in several parts of

How Long the Walk to Town Seems If You Have a Car!

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MARY ANNE SMITH had a job in an office where she earned $100 a month.

Her dad was rich, but he didn't believe in spoiling daughters. "Let 'em earn their spending money," he would say, "and they'll realize what a dollar is worth."

One evening when Mary Anne was away from home her dad and mother discussed her future.

"When she marries," said the old man, "I want her to keep her pride. I won't have any man cracking a whip over her and I won't have her begging any man for pin money. I'm going to establish a trust fund that will pay her an income of ten thousand a year and give it to her as a wedding present."

"It won't do, John," said Mary Anne's mother. "A wife must depend on her husband. Mary Anne is good and sensible, but if you give her an independent income she won't be a good wife. She'll make life miserable for her husband or she'll divorce him inside of a year. A partnership won't last if people can break it without losing anything."

"You're wrong, mother," said the old man. "But I'll try a little experiment and if it turns out that you're right I'll buy you a new car."

When Mary Anne came home her dad talked to her.

"Like your job, Mary Anne?"

"Fine, dad. No complaint."

"Well, it doesn't pay you enough money. Beginning tomorrow I'm going to give you an allowance of $100 a month. Keep on working and you'll have $200 a month to spend."

"Whoops!" cried Mary Anne. "You old darling!"

Six months passed, as months will, and Mary Anne came home at night with fire in her eye.

"I'm jobless," she announced.

"How come?" asked her dad.

"The boss got fresh," said Mary Anne. "Gave me too much lip. He's been impolite and snappy for a long time. I've been noticing it for six months. And when he got impudent this afternoon I quit."

Mary Anne's dad looked at Mary Anne's mother and sighed. He disliked losing money.

"Mother," said he, "if you have nothing else to do in the morning we'll go down and pick out that car."

Still, any man who expends the energy necessary to keep himself perfect hasn't time to fret about the morals of anybody else.

Government says there aren't any rainmakers, but it should watch the gentleman who plans Sunday school picnics.

Historians are written by men, and you can more readily get their true significance by remembering that the rooster cackles louder than the hen that lays the eggs.

the parade. Would your correspondent have had the people salute those flags as they passed? They ought not have been permitted in the parade.

I am an American, tracing my American ancestry back through seven generations. My great-grandfather fought at Brandywine, Monmouth, Germantown and Yorktown to establish the Nation. My grandfather served under Harrison in the War of 1812. I followed that flag from April 22, 1861, to September 28, 1865. I think this record will establish my right to speak of the flag. When properly displayed I always feel like taking off my hat to it, but when degraded by being made a part of a circus parade, I want to throw a brick at the man carrying it. The flag should be held a sacred thing, and not so profusely displayed as to take its sacredness away.

GREENS, FRUIT AND SUNSHINE.

This is the season of greens, fruit and sunshine, according to the Huntington Press. Northern Indiana is getting more than fifteen hours a day of daylight or nearly daylight. It is an opportunity to fill up on the energy that summer brings and store up resources for the winter of nine hours of pale sunshine and less than ten hours of daylight.

Greens, fruit and sunshine have been the subject of centuries of thought and much is known of all of them. The last decade has added much to the information. Medical science has advanced and physical trainers have practiced and human health has been improved.

To get the most from greens and fruit it is not necessary to eat them exclusively, nor even desirable to do so. But in the summer these things are at their best and they are a natural summer food by inheritance and custom. Lettuce in the winter time is an accomplishment of a very short time. It results from rapid transportation. The same is true of bananas, pineapples and oranges.

There is a good physiological reason for our liking for dandelions, spinach, tomatoes, radishes, cabbage, cauliflower and roasting ears, just as there is a sound reason for our taste for strawberries, melons, blackberries and apples. Health demands them and demands sunshine and exercise in the open.

Very fortunately, with the development of tasks that require work inside there is a growing time of leisure, and those who are wise will spend part of it in the open; for physicians have discovered that sunshine not only stores up health and vitality but that it wards off and even cures some diseases.

Science gives many reasons why these things are true. These reasons may interest, but they need not worry us. The important thing is that they are true.

Those who take advantage of the facts from a sense of duty are the better for doing so, but those who do so from choice and pleasure get a twofold benefit.

Round Trip from Washington

Across Puget Sound from Seattle and Tacoma lies the Olympic Peninsula—cloaked by giant timber, studded with snow peaks, cut by swirling streams, haunted by big game. Unsurpassed for variety and majestic beauty—in many places a land still unexplored where, with Indian guides, in "dug-outs" or by pack train, you may leave civilization behind.

Skirting the mysterious interior are broad highways that lead to mountain hidden Lake Crescent; to glacier-rimmed Lake Quinalt; or to Pacific Beach, where the warm Japanese current makes ocean bathing in sight of snow-capped peaks delightful. Indian villages—excellent hotels, sporty golf courses.

The Olympic Peninsula adds its unique attractions to those of Rainier National Park, the Cascades and Mt. Baker in making the Pacific Northwest first choice of vacationists.

FIRST LADY VISITS DULUTH; SURPRISES SHOPPING THROUGHS

50-Mile Trip to Beauty Parlor
Made With Slight Notice
in Advance.

ALL WORK SUSPENDED;
TRAFFIC IS REROUTED

Warm Sun Permits President to Attend to Business on Lawn of Estate.

Duluth, Minn., June 25 (A.P.).—Mrs. Coolidge thrilled residents of Duluth today by driving some 50 miles from Cedar Island Lodge to patronize the beauty parlors of one of the department stores here.

Apparently wishing to take advantage of the first day of brilliant sunshine since her arrival with the President she made the trip with her housekeeper and nurse. Few knew she was coming and it was a surprised cashier who looked up to find the "First Lady of the Land" asking the way to the beauty parlor.

Some warning had been given, however, and the signs had been vigorously scrubbed and booth No. 6 hurriedly tidied and brightened with a bouquet of tea roses. According to her appointment, Mrs. Coolidge was to receive a scalp treatment, shampoo, manicure and manicure. She wore a dark gray tweed suit, a large red felt hat and a silver fur.

Word spread through the business district that Mrs. Coolidge was in town and police reserves were sent to the store to keep the crowds in order. Work was suspended in the office buildings in the neighborhood and windows were crammed with persons hoping to see Mrs. Coolidge as she left. Business in the store itself was at a standstill. Women who happened to be there when she entered refused to leave, as did those who came later and heard the news.

Traffic Is Rerouted.
The sidewalks of Superior street were lined for blocks, and so many were standing in the streets that policemen rerouted traffic. It had been planned to close off the block in which the store is located, but Mrs. Coolidge spoiled that by arriving early.

As she left, Mrs. Coolidge gave each of the three girls who did her work a bright shiny quarter and supplied, in answer to a request to return, that they would find her hard to get rid of. She indicated her return by opening a charge account.

Mrs. Coolidge said she liked the country and was enjoying the vacation at Cedar Island Lodge. She bowed and smiled her way through the crowds outside the store, posed for the photographers and then was whisked away to Wisconsin, across the bay.

Coolidge Works on Lawn.
Superior, Wis., June 25 (A.P.).—Under a warm sun, which gave to Cedar Island Lodge for the first time a really summery aspect, President Coolidge attended to business in the open air today on the lawn bordering the Brule River.

The mail from Washington was heavier today than usual. White House officials said that it was merely an accumulation of routine matters which hardly required more than Mr. Coolidge's signature. Its volume was such, however, that the Chief Executive was prevented from taking as much exercise as he would have liked.

Everett Saunders, secretary to the President, left for a short visit to Chicago today. At the White House it was said that his departure had no official character and that he had not even left an address where he could be reached.

Indianapolis Rate Complain Dismissed

(Associated Press.)

A complaint of the Indianapolis Board of Trade against the levels of railroad rates on grain and grain products moving via Indianapolis to Eastern Railroads and to Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad points south of the Ohio River was dismissed yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The decision held that the Indianapolis claim that eastern Indiana points had better rates to the Eastern territory, distance considered, was unfounded, and refused to disturb the present rate levels.

At the same time the commission also set aside an attempt by railroads to increase grain rates from points in Ohio to West Virginia by average amounts of 2 1/2 cents per 100 pounds. The increases have been under suspension since they were proposed, and in concluding the investigation yesterday the commission ordered the road to cancel the higher schedules and to maintain existing rates.

Miss Leila S. Holt
Announces Betrothal

(Associated Press.)

Winter Park, Fla., June 25 (A.P.).—Announcement of the engagement of Miss Leila Stuart Holt, daughter of President and Mrs. Hamilton Holt, of Rollins College, to Maurice Rotival, of Paris, was made here today by her parents. The wedding will be held in early August at the Holt summer home near Woodstock, Conn.

Miss Holt is a graduate of Smith College and for the last year has been the guest in Paris of Rotival's sister, who was her classmate. The bridegroom-to-be is a son of a high railroad official and was a captain in the French aviation corps during the World War.

Had to Go First, Says Gen. Nobile in Message

By GEN. UMBERTO NOBILE.

Base Ship Citta di Milano, Virgo Bay, Spitzbergen, June 25 (via Stefani Agency, Rome) (A.P.).—When yesterday morning Lieut. Lundborg handed me the message which told me I ought to take off Cecconi on the first flight, then Behounek, then Tolano, then me, then Viglieri and Blag.

Lundborg refused. He told me he had received orders to take me off immediately, for I could give directions for searching for the others. He insisted firmly that I should leave first and that I would make them more tranquil for every eventuality. So I was forced to yield against the dictates of my heart and also to avoid delay.

At the time the plane departed Cecconi was well. I turned over direction of the group to Viglieri. I hope to embrace them soon and I hope Divine Providence will allow me to see again the others.

message from the ship to the Russian government at Moscow.

There was nothing new as regards Amundsen today, and he was definitely lost as last Tuesday, when he failed to arrive at Kings Bay from Tromsø, Norway, as expected. Since then there has not been a word, authentic radio signal or other indication as to what became of the seaplane and the six men on board.

Despite further scouting expeditions, too, there has been nothing learned of the two other groups of seven and three of the Italia's crew, lost since the Italia crashed on May 1, just a month ago. (Copyright, 1928, by Associated Press.)

For Balks Aviators.
Oslo, Norway, June 25 (A.P.).—It is reported from Spitzbergen that a heavy fog prevented the take-off of Swedish planes from their base at the steamer Quent today in an attempt to rescue Lieut. Einar-Paul Lundborg, down on the ice with part of the Italia's crew. It was said that the weather would start as soon as the weather permitted.

Meanwhile Maj. Penzo left Bergen this afternoon in his seaplane, the Marina, for Tromsø. Penzo arrived at Sørørd, north of Bergen, yesterday after a flight from Spitzbergen in an attempt to find the missing Røisid Amundsen-Guilbaud plane.

Nobile Asks Small Planes.
Rome, June 25 (A.P.).—A dispatch from the Stefani agency says that Umberto Nobile sent a message to his comrades still on the ice near Foyin Island informing them that two small airplanes had been requested from England as a "precautionary measure."

It is believed here Gen. Nobile means to use the small planes as a complement to the Swedish planes, inasmuch as the small airplane equipped with ski wheels has proved more efficient than larger ones for landing on the ice.

31 Burglaries Laid To Football Star

(Associated Press.)

Los Angeles, June 25 (A.P.).—Johnny Hawkins, former football star and once captain of the University of Southern California Team, was charged with 31 counts of burglary today in a complaint issued by the district attorney's office.

The complaint sets the amount of loot obtained by Hawkins at approximately $100,000. Many of the valuable jewels allegedly stolen by Hawkins have been discovered buried near the roots of palm trees between Fullerton and Alhambra, suburbs of Los Angeles, where he hid the loot in the eaves of a garage in Los Angeles. Several large homes figured in the robberies.

Explorer Conquers Himalayas in Winter

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Munich, June 25.—With frozen feet, two broken ribs and many other scars, showing the hardships he endured, Wilhelm Filchner, the "Tibet explorer," who long has been mourned as dead by Germans, returned home today.

With one American and a British missionary he accomplished the extraordinary feat of crossing the Himalayas in midwinter, from Leh to Srinagar, during which the intrepid explorer lived hourly in danger of their lives. They saw the remains of a wrecked caravan of 72, who perished in a similar attempt.

After a rest in Germany, Herr Filchner intends to visit America.

B. Y. P. U. Debates Union With Alliance

(Associated Press.)

Toronto, Ontario, June 25 (A.P.).—Delegates representing the Baptist Young Peoples Union at the Fourth Congress of the Baptist World Alliance here today debated the proposed affiliation of the union with the alliance. The discussion will be continued at tomorrow's session.

Delegates from the United States and Canada today asserted that the union as a separate entity had a strong appeal to young people of the church, but during the debate the delegates, representing the union with the alliance, had an encouraging effect in Europe.

STEWART INDICTED ON PERJURY CHARGE AS SENATE WITNESS

Denial That He Knew of Bond
Distribution Held Statute Violation.

3 COUNTS RETURNED
AGAINST OIL OPERATOR

Trial Held Impossible Before
Fall Despite Defendant's
Early Action Plea.

(Associated Press.)

In less than two weeks after his acquittal on a charge of refusing to answer questions of the Senate oil committee as a result of his testimony in the Continental Trading Co. investigation, Robert W. Stewart, head of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, yesterday was indicted by a Federal grand jury on three counts of perjury before the same committee.

At the committee hearing last February Stewart asserted in the negative when asked if he had any knowledge that would lead him to believe any organization or individual had received any part of the $3,000,000 of the Liberty bond oil profits of the Continental Trading Co.

No Action Before Fall.
Appearing again in April, Stewart told the committee he had received $750,000 in Liberty bonds from H. S. Coker president of the Continental. He explained he had turned the bonds over to a trust fund he had established for his company and finally did turn the bonds over to it in April of this year.

It was this testimony that caused John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to demand Stewart's resignation as chairman of the Indiana corporation's board of directors.

Conviction on a perjury charge carries a penalty of from 2 to 10 years in prison. Return of the indictment was followed by a statement by Stewart's counsel, charging that it represented "the last word in the outrageous use of court processes for political purposes," an "indictive attempt to overcome" the acquittal of twelve days ago. Stewart, they said, would seek immediate trial, confident of acquittal of this second indictment.

It was said at the district attorney's office, however, that it would be impossible to reach the case before fall.

Perjury Statute Violation Charged.

The indictment charges in the first count that Stewart violated the perjury statute when he denied anything of the distribution of the Continental bonds; the second count alleges he denied the receipt of any of the bonds, when in fact he received $750,000; and the third, that he denied having any conversation or knowledge of the distribution of the bonds, when in fact he knew of the receipt of the bonds by himself and by others.

Stewart did not appear in court to plead to the new charges, and it was said that his counsel would be notified to have him appear when a date is decided upon.

New York, June 25 (A.P.).—Col. Robert W. Stewart, head of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, was indicted on three counts of perjury by a Federal grand jury in Washington, was here today, but checked out of the Hotel Biltmore street office, it comes from the Orient, the Philippines, Canada, Latin America and all sections of the United States.

Unsorted mail is sorted in the Varick street clearing house. It is handled in three departments, on different floors. The fact all three classes of pouches were gone through is proof to Clara that a small band of robbers could not have done the job there.

Bela Kun Extradition Refused by Austria

(Associated Press.)

Vienna, June 25 (A.P.).—The Austrian government definitely refused today to comply with the demand of Hungary that Bela Kun, the communist who inaugurated a "red terror" in Hungary in 1919, be extradited. The refusal was based on the political character of the charges.

Trial of Bela Kun will begin in Vienna tomorrow on charges that he entered Austria under a false German passport.

Kun has been under arrest since April 28 and police then asserted that he was engaged in a plot to inaugurate a fresh communist regime in Hungary under the patronage of Moscow.

Peerage Is Declined By Retiring Speaker

(Associated Press.)

London, June 25 (A.P.).—The Right Hon. John Henry Wintley, speaker of the house of commons retired, has declined the king's offer of a peerage. The speaker explained that he took this attitude for "personal reasons."

Wintley's request is a departure from precedent, which has been maintained for more than 120 years, every speaker during that period having accepted a peerage. The king always bestows the honor in response to the "humble petition" of the house of commons, which undertakes to defray all expenses in connection with the bestowal.

U. S. Bound Zeppelin May Fly On to Asia

(Associated Press.)

Friedrichshafen, June 25 (A.P.).—The new German dirigible LZ-127 may make a trip to East Asia by way of California.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, Zeppelin builder, in addressing visiting members of the German foreign institute, said that in the event his scheduled flight to America in the second half of August fulfilled all expectations he was planning at the beginning of October to continue westward with stops in California and Eastern Asia.

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, June 25.—The $500,000 Leviathan mail robbery and Herald Square's recent daylight murder were linked today by Chief Postal Inspector C. L. Claraham.

Pointing out that Edwin J. Jerge, supposed drug dealer, who was shot down from a motor car in Herald Square last June 17, had a record as a money-order forger, Claraham announced he had assigned men to work out that clue.

Furthermore, the chief inspector recalled that the Jerge murder took place the day after the Leviathan robbery, in contrast to officials of the United States Lines, that the gigantic theft took place on board the liner.

"The fact that Jerge was killed the day after the Leviathan sailed," Claraham said, "and that he specialized in mail crimes has put us on the trail of his killers."

"We are proceeding on the theory that Jerge may have been put out of the way because he knew too much of the plot, or that, if the crime took place before the Leviathan sailed, there may have been a quarrel over the split."

Robbers Worked Leisurely.
Meanwhile, Claraham continued to run down other clues as cable dispatches reported that Scotland Yard believes the 900 sacks were looted before the queen of the American merchant marine cleared New York. The yard, London's famous detective headquarters, scouted the suggestion that the robbery had taken place on the short run from Cherbourg to Southampton. Each looted pouch bore a counterfeit lead seal, London reported, indicating that the job had been done thoroughly and that the robbers had not been pressed for time.

Claraham also was informed by cable from Berlin that two bags consigned to the city, one holding registered mail, the other ordinary, were found also to have been plundered. All Leviathan mail addressed to the continent was being examined by postal inspectors in the respective countries.

Another interesting disclosure of today was that the sorted mail, by far the larger part of the 6,000 sacks, had been dumped into a hold. The hold was sealed, but unguarded, during the voyage and the four seagoing clerks aboard had no access to it.

Theft Difficulty Cited.
The theory of the United States Lines, which would have to make good the losses if it were established the crime took place aboard the great liner, that it happened before the mail reached the ship was pooh-poohed by Claraham.

"It would have taken the collusion of nearly 1,000 postal employees," he said, "all European-bound mail, from whatever point of origin, goes to the Varick street office. It comes from the Orient, the Philippines, Canada, Latin America and all sections of the United States."

Unsorted mail is sorted in the Varick street clearing house. It is handled in three departments, on different floors. The fact all three classes of pouches were gone through is proof to Clara that a small band of robbers could not have done the job there.

Cairo, Egypt, June 25 (A.P.).—A royal rescript was issued today dismissing the cabinet, the reason given being a breakdown of the present coalition.

CHINA NATIONALISTS CONFIDENT THAT U. S. PLANS RECOGNITION

Wu Hopeful Because of Nations' Policy of Sustaining Peking Controllers.

TREATY NEGOTIATIONS CHIEF WORK OF OFFICIALS

Expression Expected Soon From State Department in Oriental Sources.

(Associated Press.)
Informal negotiations looking to the recognition of the Chinese Nationalist government have not reached the stage where the State Department will comment on their status, but representatives of the Nationalist regime here are confident that an expression indicating progress is no way out of order and may be made soon by the United States.

The Nationalists, through their representative in this country, Dr. C. C. Wu, have presented informally the matter of revising the Chinese treaties to the State Department in addition to asking recognition, and Dr. Wu has said the department is giving the subject consideration. Dr. Wu believes the United States will give the matter its attention to the Nationalists as a matter of course, since it has been the policy of the world powers to recognize the government in China having control of Peking.

Chinese Eager for Treaties.
If the United States refuses recognition but agrees to negotiate new treaties, which Dr. Wu believes is entirely possible, the Nationalist government of China in no way will press for recognition, as revision of the treaties is the prime consideration of the Nationalist foreign office.

The Nationalist government has been eager to negotiate treaties with the United States since the Nanking incident settlement of last year, which was taken to be the first step toward acknowledgment of the new Chinese powers. In some circles here there is opposition to recognizing the Nationalists on account of their strong desire to abolish the present treaties, particularly those relating to customs and concessions.

Expression Expected Soon.
While it is understood that no formal approach has been made to this government, reports from Chinese sources indicate some expression is expected soon from the United States. It has been intimated tacitly that consideration has been given both to the matter of recognition and treaty revision and there is an air of expectancy in diplomatic circles.

The statement of Secretary Kellogg in February, 1927, that the United States would recognize any established Chinese government representative of all China, including Manchuria, is the basis on which Dr. Wu made his informal approach for recognition.

It has been made clear that this country may recognize the Nationalist regime as a de facto or a de jure government through a willingness to negotiate new treaties, even if to exploit recognition is made.

It is understood that action by the United States depends largely upon developments in China and whether the Nationalist government will show willingness and display ability to safely carry out international obligations.

Manchuria Invasion Faced Under Southern Threat

Shanghai, June 25 (A.P.).—The Nationalist government has decided to demand that Chang Hsueh-Liang, new overlord of Manchuria, accept Nationalist suzerainty, otherwise the Nationalists plan a military invasion of Manchuria.

The Central Daily News quotes the Nationalist foreign minister as stating in an interview that the United States consul general informed him last Friday that recognition of the Nationalist government would be effected shortly and negotiations opened with the Nationalists for revision of unequal treaties.

The minister was quoted as adding that the French consul general would maintain friendly relations between China and France and that no abrupt policy would be adopted.

Mukden, Manchuria, June 25 (A.P.).—Chang Hsueh-Liang, recently named military governor of Mukden, announced in a proclamation yesterday that he had assumed the office of president in order to develop Manchuria.

He stressed that the people would be granted a voice in provincial affairs. He is receiving condolences from a steady stream of prominent visitors on the death of his father, Chang Tso-Lin, once dictator of north China. The third day rites for the dead ruler were performed Saturday. The consular body attended.

Chang Hsueh-Liang is the son of the late Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, former northern dictator who died from wounds he suffered early this month when a bomb exploded under the train on which he was returning to his Manchurian capital, Mukden, after being forced out of Peking by the Nationalists.

An invasion of Manchuria by the Nationalists might easily assume grave consequences as the Japanese have announced definitely that they would not permit the Chinese civil war to invade Manchuria. The Japanese have several thousand troops in Manchuria guarding Japanese interests there.

Chang Hsueh-Liang is looked upon as one of the most liberal of the Manchurian group which now controls that region and it is possible that he will cooperate with the Nationalists. Recent dispatches said that he was considering this step, but that the older school of Manchurians were decidedly opposed to any such action.

Good Impression at Berlin.
Berlin, June 25 (A.P.).—Secretary Kellogg's new note has created an excellent impression here, the Wilhelmstrasse officials emphasizing that the American proposal conforms with the German viewpoint.

Great significance is attached to the proposed pact, as it is a peace demonstration, with the full backing of the United States, and hence indicative of future disarmament. It is realized, however, that there are difficulties yet to be overcome and that the attitude of the French government will influence the prospects.

In its reply to Secretary Kellogg the German government is expected to assist in principle to the suggestion contained in his note.

NEW KELLOGG PACT RECEIVED HEARTILY IN CAPITALS ABROAD

Considerable Advance Seen by Officials at London, Commons Is Told.

BRIAND WILL TAKE NOTE BEFORE CABINET TODAY

Excellent Impression Made by Revised Proposals in Wilhelmstrasse.

London, June 25 (A.P.).—The British government apparently is favorable on the new draft of the proposed treaty to outlaw war. Reviving in the house of commons today as to whether the new Kellogg proposal would enable the government to sign the pact without reservation, Godfrey Locker-Lampson, undersecretary of the foreign office, said:

"In the opinion of the government the note marks a considerable advance, and it is being most sympathetically considered."

Of four morning papers commenting on Secretary Kellogg's revised draft of the pact, the Daily Telegraph, the Daily News and Westminster Gazette and the Daily Chronicle—welcomed it heartily. They said it ought to remove the French from other "negotiations." They hoped it would be accepted promptly.

The Morning Post remarked sarcastically that the pact was more likely to introduce more hypocrisy into the world than to promote peace.

French Are Favorable.
Paris, June 25 (A.P.).—The proposal of Secretary of State Kellogg for a multilateral treaty outlawing war will be presented to the cabinet tomorrow by Foreign Minister Briand. The proposal is understood to meet with the approval of the government, although some attempt to give contractual value to Secretary Kellogg's comments in answer to the French reservations is expected.

ARLINGTON COUNTY FIREMEN HOLD FETE TO LIFT MORTGAGE

1,000 Attend Opening Night of Week's Carnival at Cherrydale.

LYON VILLAGE PLANS PATRIOTIC FESTIVAL

Children's Parade and Fireworks Arranged for July 4 Celebration.

ARLINGTON COUNTY.
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.
The Cherrydale Fire Department opened its twentieth annual carnival on the school grounds last night with more than 1,000 persons attending. The grounds were illuminated with hundreds of colored electric lights. Many special attractions have been added, including a ferris wheel and merry-go-round.

General Chairman J. A. Spate said that the committee will have special attractions each night during the week. The carnival will continue through Saturday night.

It is the hope of the committee that the department with the closing of the carnival will be in a position to burn the $5,000 mortgage now on the firemen's hall.

A warning is being sounded through the county that unless some steps are taken soon the United States will have built its memorial bridge across the Potomac and the county will not have built any road approach to the span.

The Federal Government plans to build a short stretch of road leading away from the bridge on the Virginia side, but just how much is unknown. Similarly, it is not known just what the county and State will do to continue the road from the point where it is dropped by the Government.

J. Cloyd Byars, of Arlington, last night asserted that "unless some concerted action is taken by county leaders in the movement looking to the construction of either the Lee boulevard or the straight-through bridge, the bridge will have been completed and Arlington County will have no approach to it."

Jury in the Circuit Court of Arlington County, yesterday, after deliberating for more than two hours brought in a verdict of guilty fixing the punishment at two years in the State penitentiary in the case of William Henry Spaulding, of Falls Church, charged with seduction. Spaulding was indicted at the term of December of the Circuit Court. Attorneys Walter T. Oliver, of Fairfax, and H. A. Shockey, of Falls Church, represented Spaulding, with Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Cloth for the Commonwealth.

On motion of Attorney Oliver sentence was delayed until Wednesday that he might argue on the grounds that the verdict was contrary to the evidence. The motion was granted by Judge Howard W. Smith.

Charged with operating an automobile under a dead tag, French Marshall was fined $14.25 in Police Court yesterday by Police Judge Harry R. Thomas.

Final arrangements for the benefit carnival and patriotic celebration to be held July 2, 3 and 4 by the Lyon Village Fire Association and the women's club were made at a meeting of the carnival committee last night in the offices of Lyon & Fitch.

Representatives of the Washington and State Senator Frank L. Ball have accepted invitations to speak at the celebration which will climax the three-day festivities. The carnival will be held at Wilson boulevard and Holly street.

Edgar W. Humphrey, representing the Arlington Post, No. 130, American Legion, will address the executive committee of the Lyon Park Citizens Association at its meeting tonight, advocating support of the beauty contest being sponsored by the American Legion.

The contest is being held for the purpose of choosing "Miss Arlington" to represent the county at the annual State convention of the Legion, to be held in August.

Suits for divorce were filed in the county clerk's office yesterday by M. Seymour against Samuel B. Seymour, and by Lena L. Maher against John B. Maher.

The Fourth of July celebration now being arranged by the Lyon Citizens Association will, according to C. K. Lewis, general chairman, be the most elaborate ever staged by the community. A parade of children in costume is planned for the morning, with athletic events in the afternoon. Fireworks and dancing and other features will be staged at night. C. K. Lewis, general chairman, is being assisted by James W. Dorsey, Arthur Orr, Mrs. T. P. Gary, Mrs. Percy S. Crewe, C. K. Lewis, A. T. Rowell, T. P. Gary, N. D. Mitchell, C. O. Wolverton, E. F. Pfeiffer, Lev Holt, Carl H. Hartung, Lawrence Michael, Mrs. S. Seymour, E. J. Merrick, J. C. Hardie and J. I. Whitlock.

Kicking Dog Around Results in Shooting

Chicago, June 25 (A.P.).—"You have got to stop," said Ernest to Julius Flair, "kicking my dog around."
"You have got to keep your dog," said Flair to Ernest, "off my lawn."
Flair drove the dog off once. When the dog returned, Flair applied the boot. Ernest saw the kick. He drew a pistol and fired three shots. Flair was sent to the hospital with two bullet wounds in the shoulder, and one in the abdomen. Ernest was arrested.

MARYLAND BALLOTS SOLICIT SUPPORT OF GOVERNOR SMITH

Ritchie Is Accorded Enthusiastic Ovation When Named for Chairman.

TYDINGS IS APPOINTED TO PLANK COMMITTEE

State Caucus Is Marked by Complete Unanimity Among Old Line Delegates.

Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.).—In a harmonious meeting in which the State's support was unanimously pledged to Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, the Maryland delegation to the Democratic national convention tonight named Gov. Albert C. Ritchie chairman of the delegation and selected a slate of officers and committee members.

Applause rocked the hotel room when Gov. Ritchie's name was suggested for chairman, and the secretary's attempt to have the motion formally entered for records was drowned out in the cheering. The smiling Maryland Governor acknowledged the tribute accorded him by the delegates with a graceful bow. Gov. Ritchie, who had the solid support of the Maryland group for President, then moved that the delegation support Gov. Smith, and applause again resounded with such enthusiasm that delegates on the floor outside started to see what caused the cheering.

United States Senator Tydings was named a member of the resolutions committee to draft a party platform, and will formally present Gov. Ritchie's plank to make prohibition a matter of State's rights and refer it to the States for action. The Maryland Governor, however, told the Associated Press he would appear before the committee in person to argue in favor of his wet plank.

Other Committeemen Named.

Other officers and committeemen elected were as follows: Enos Ray, chairman of the State central committee, named a member of the committee on credentials; E. Brooke Lee, speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates, named member of the committee to notify the presidential nominee; E. C. Weant, Carroll County, member of the rules committee; Henry P. Turney, Talbot County, member of the permanent organization committee; William P. Mitchell, State senator, vice chairman national convention; William P. Lane, Jr., Washington County, assistant secretary of the national convention, and Thomas H. Robinson, attorney general, honorary vice chairman of the delegation.

The Maryland delegation occupies probably the most commodious headquarters of any attending the convention. Signs showed the way to a large apartment on the mezzanine floor of the Rice Hotel, where pictures of the Maryland executive and Gov. Smith were much in evidence. Gov. Ritchie was there himself during a larger part of the day and was visited by hundreds of friends in a never-ending stream. Among those visiting Maryland headquarters were outstanding Democrats, who informed the Maryland Governor that they regretted not having the opportunity to cast their votes for him. He acknowledged the compliment and expressed the hope that delegates so expressing themselves would give like consideration to the candidacy of Gov. Smith.

The State caucus was not held until late in the afternoon and was over in a few minutes. It was largely one of cheering and the secretary, Comptroller William S. Gordy, of Salisbury, could hardly put motions before the delegation before there would be thunderous cries of "aye." Election of Mrs. Elizabeth Menefee, of Cumberland, as national committeewoman by the State convention was unanimously approved by the delegation in a rising tribute.

Trip Arrangements Praised.

E. Brooke Lee, offered a motion for a rising vote of thanks to Daniel Loden, State Senator Ambrose Kennedy, Robert Ennis and George Lewis for their work in organizing the trip to the convention.

A large photograph of Gov. Ritchie hung above the chairman's desk at the front assembly hall while round the sides were enormous photographs of Gov. Al Smith. Maryland delegates were wearing Ritchie and Smith badges side by side and proclaiming their allegiance to both men though Gov. Ritchie was out of the Presidential contest.

"I just want the convention delegates to know that Maryland is for Ritchie, even though he does not choose to run," was the way one member of the delegation expressed it.

The Williamsport Band has already taken the convention by storm with its "Sidewalks of New York" and "Maryland, My Maryland." The band composed of 38 pieces took a trip to Galveston today, but will be back in the convention city and blowing away tonight while Smith supporters cheered. David E. Winebrener, secretary of State, was among a number of visitors who came to the convention with delegates. Mayor Byron, of Williamsport, also was present, an enthusiastic supporter of the Community Bank.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's car was attached to the Maryland special train about 50 miles from Houston in the trip to the convention city. She found many old friends on the Maryland car.

Alabama Divides Its 24 Votes Among 5 Aspirants

Houston, June 25 (A.P.).—A. H. Carmichael, chairman of the Alabama delegation, announced tonight that eight of the delegates from that State had decided to vote for George, of Georgia, on the first ballot; six for Hull, of Tennessee; four for Donahay, of Ohio; four for Jones, of Texas, and two for Woolen, of Indiana.

The delegates disclosed their first ballot intentions at a caucus held behind closed doors. They are not bound by the unit rule, are uninstructed and can support any candidate they desire.

The Smith forces had not counted on any of the 24 Alabama delegates, as it generally was regarded as an anti-Smith delegation.

New Cabinet Effort In Yugoslavia Fails

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, June 25 (A.P.).—King Alexander, convinced that the present cabinet can not endure in the face of the inflamed feeling in Croatia, today asked, first, Stefan Stefanovich, and then the radical leader, Stanoyevitch, to form a new cabinet. Both failed, however, to compose the conflicting party differences, and were obliged to resign their tasks.

It now is supposed that the only solution is the formation of an emergency cabinet with an active general as premier as was proposed last February by Stefan Raditch, wounded peasant leader.

TAMMANY, VICTORY IN SIGHT IS HUMORING "HOME BOYS"

further and with a frankness that permits of quotation "why we have no right to take sides against Smith if there is a law enforcement plank. Of course, he will enforce the law as well as the present administration is doing," probably better.

His influence in doubt.

Just how much influence Mr. Dinwiddie will have with his committee when he returns after the convention with this law enforcement plank remains to be seen. It is not likely that he will have much with the Rev. F. Scott McBride, of the Antislavery League, who has made some strong anti-Smith pronouncements. But Mr. Dinwiddie's attitude toward the significance of the plank is not clear.

Mr. Dinwiddie's attitude, frankly, is that the Republicans have made such a poor showing of prohibition enforcement that the drys' real hope lies with the Democrats.

So the Democratic Congress would be drier than the present regime, he points out.

But before it is all over down here, Houston will have stamped itself indelibly in Democracy's memory. The bands go around playing "The Side-walks of New York" and the Tammany managers say, "Oh, I wish they wouldn't do that." The retiring Tammany managers—Houston is right disappointed in them. But the Southern vendors see the handwriting on the wall and, seeing it, decide they will make money out of the situation. Thus, there are Al Smith walking canes, Al Smith ribbons, Al Smith hats—there is even an Al Smith hamburger sandwich. So the Tammany managers can't get away from the atmosphere.

"Marching Through Georgia."

A band insisted on serenading them with "The Side-walks of New York." They finally prevailed upon it to go around to the headquarters of Senator George, of Georgia, and the band, thinking it would be right, played "Marching Through Georgia." A Michigan National Guard Infantry Regiment sang that on the border in 1916, while marching through a Georgia Cavalry camp, and was immediately routed by the fusillade of rocks but at the Georgia headquarters the serene given by "The Side-walks of New York" was accepted in good faith.

"It was the cut-in of the home boys." The local newspapers carry headlines, "Southern Drys Give Ultimatum," "Moody Lays Down the Law," and kindred utterances that might be considered inimical to Smith. However, there is Senator Giles, of Virginia, who does not want Smith and is further in a bad mood because when he was here there was no room reserved for him, and he had finally to share a bath with his colleague, Senator Swanson—at least one time when they have been in perfect accord. But, said the senator, in arguing to unseat the Louisiana delegation today:

"The man who is the inevitable nominee of this convention does not need these votes. And if I were his closest friend I would talk as I am talking now." He wants to unseat the delegation, which is committed to Smith.

released, but it is understood that Democratic State Chairman Peters has the Woolen release in his pocket ready for use in an emergency. It is held that not less than 25 of the Hoosiers want to vote for Smith not later than the second ballot and will do so on the first if it becomes apparent that there is to be no second roll call. Even though they vote for Woolen on the first ballot they would have the opportunity of switching to Smith before the announcement of the result.

As the Southern delegations caused the running of the Smith band wagon became louder and louder. Virginia reported 6 out of 24 delegates for Smith in North Carolina it was disclosed that there will be 4½ votes out of 24 for Smith on the first ballot, and more on the second if the balloting goes that far. In Alabama a row developed when it was discovered that several members of the delegation insisted on voting for Smith and the caucus was postponed until tomorrow.

Favorite Sons Win.

The Mississippi delegation voted to support Senator Harrison, of that State, as a favorite son on the first ballot, but it transpired that eleven of the twenty are for Smith. The understanding at the conclusion of the caucus was that Mississippi would be voted for Smith as soon as the complimentary vote was given to Harrison.

A count of the noses in the caucus showed the Kansas delegation disclosed fifteen of the twenty members in favor of Smith. It was determined to give a complimentary vote to Representative Ayres on the first ballot and thereafter to vote as the majority of the delegation may direct.

The Oklahoma delegation got into a squabble as the result of the insistence of the Smith partisans in their ranks that no time be wasted in climbing aboard the Smith band wagon. A majority of this delegation is for Smith. The minority is for Reed. The dispute was ended by postponement of action until Wednesday morning. The preponderant strength of the Smith following in the delegation was shown, however, when the Oklahoma elected John A. Simpson, of Oklahoma City, they would prefer that every aspirant to the nomination should put his full strength on the first ballot. They do not want to place themselves in the position of coercing or influencing the second choice of the Buckeye State delegates. When the Ohio delegation reached Houston today, however, it developed that 44 of its members are in favor of voting for Smith as the earliest opportunity. Mr. Pomerene did not come with the delegation, but Mrs. Pomerene did, and she is said to have in her possession a statement by her husband withdrawing in favor of Smith.

"Ohio will support Pomerene on the first ballot," said Mr. White, "but it is possible the delegation will go to Gov. Smith later. In fact, the switch will be made on the first ballot if it becomes necessary."

The 30 Hoosiers are instructed to vote for Evans Woolen until by him their member of the resolutions committee in preference to former Gov. C. N. Haskell, who represents the bone dry element.

King, Hall and Underwood Urged for Vice President

Houston, Tex., June 25 (A.P.).—Shifting winds of preconvention speculation today swept new names into the headlines do not mean, but which is true, nevertheless, is that they are solidified right in the lobby of the Rice Hotel. The State of Texas in particular, the Solid South, together with the rest of the Democrats, play up cards all over town, reading "Visitors first and home folks next."

But with the sons of Texas from the cotton fields, from the cattle ranges and the cattle exchanges, oil riggers and oil millionaires, it is impossible to move around, it takes two hours to go from the lobby of the hotel to the roof unless you want to walk up eighteen stories. A delegation that you want to find in room 1416 might just as well be in San Francisco, so far as getting to it is concerned, save that the telephone toll is not as much. And in the sardine-packed crowd the band, called the Cowboy Band, strikes up "Dixie" and you never hear such cheering in your life. Even Tammany cheers. "Play that instead of 'The Side-walks of New York,'" it utters. The Tammany Wits slickers know that when you play "Dixie" down here men go off to war, vote for Smith, or do anything.

And out of all this medley or motley of Democracy—it is hard to tell just which—there arises the picture of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, hailed as the party's first lady, or, as the offshoots of the crabs put it, the first lady of the land—a majestic statue to which Democracy here is paying homage as if it were the Statue of Liberty. Women who wear silk frocks when cotton goes up but tingham when it goes down, fight to touch her hand. A woman of the South, and, too, the widow of Woodrow Wilson. Why, she is a great queen moving about in state.

Tragic Figure of J. A. Reed.

And in contrast to the acclaim which is here is what might be called the tragic figure of Senator James A. Reed, one of those who denied her husband's dream of world peace. He is a tragic figure, but there is no tragedy in his heart. It is generally agreed that "Jim" Reed breaks loose there will be no harmony in this convention, a tribute to the power which the man now has over his party.

But without breaking loose, the senator is mostly alone. There must be a lot going on in his mind and he moves about, silver-haired and grim, in the early morning hours, upbraiding newspaper men for not going to bed. He held counsel in the early morning hours of today with the drys, the Wilsonian lot of them, although Wilson was, of course, not a dry, and now seems satisfied that some of the drys will rally around him, so that the history of the party will read that he got more votes in 1928 than simply those from his native State. He does not want to be left as a favorite son. If the senator had any more serious ambitions than that right now, well, there wouldn't be so much harmony. His admirers say that it is to his credit that there is.

But there is the contrast between him and the first lady of Democracy just the same—the picture of the other just going slowly about his business.

THEA RASCHE IN CANADA PLANNING ATLANTIC HOP

Mrs. Stillman, Her Backer, Outwits Alleged Plotters Against Trip.

HAS PLANE FLOWN NORTH

New York, June 25 (A.P.).—Miss Thea Rasche, German stunt flier, and her plane were in the Province of Quebec tonight, where she is preparing to fly within a few days to Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to refuel for her projected transatlantic flight, Mrs. James A. Stillman, wife of the banker and backer of the monoplane, told Star, in which Miss Rasche hopes to make the Atlantic, arrived at Cap de la Madeleine, a new air field near Three Rivers, Quebec, tonight after flight from the Hadley Airport, South Plainfield, N. J. It carried a pilot and a mechanic. Miss Rasche is at Grand Mere, having preceded it to Canada by train.

Mrs. Stillman's announcement ended hours of conjecture that arose when the plane took off from the Jersey Airport for an unannounced destination. It had been flown from Long Island to New Jersey late Friday. When it did not land at any of the Long Island flying fields, aviation authorities there suggested that it probably was headed for Old Orchard, Me., but it did not land there. Today Supreme Court Justice Valentine refused to make permanent an injunction to restrain Miss Rasche from making a transatlantic flight under any management but that of Howard W. Harwell, associated with the Hollis Corporation, former backers who had sought the order.

Mrs. Stillman charged that she had to thwart a conspiracy of Long Island pilots before she could get the plane to Canada.

"I can't be bothered by petty annoyances any more in this flight," she said. "That is why I have the plane which is my own, flown to Canada. I did not advise Miss Rasche to go. She went of her own volition."

"But there will be no further effort to fly the plane from American soil. I regret that. But I'm doing what I think American women want me to do for this German girl."

With the Canadian flight in view, Mrs. Stillman said she engaged a pilot for three days at a wage of $14 an hour, but he withdrew on a plea of other business. She said she was unable to obtain another pilot, so she entrusted the task to her 16-year-old son, Alex, who today accompanied Capt. Elmer Koenemann to Hadley Field. There, she said, they met Ben Zebora, Bellanca engineer, who flew with Koenemann to Canada.

Mrs. Stillman said she previously had obtained a plane for her son, James.

MISS EARHART'S CREW AVOIDS SOCIETY FETES

Stultz and Gordon Fly to Paris Leaving Passenger as Their Proxy.

BUT WILL MEET WALES

London, June 25 (A.P.).—While Miss Amelia Earhart, ocean flier, remained in London to represent the crew of the plane Friendship, Wilmer Stultz and Louis Gordon, her teammates went by air to Paris.

Stultz and Gordon, apparently, are not very fond of social functions, and whenever there is an opportunity to slip away, they magnanimously leave the honors to Miss Earhart. They hope to return to London tomorrow to meet the Prince of Wales, Lady Astor having arranged to bring the airman and the prince together.

At a luncheon in the afternoon, given by Lady Heath, herself a noted flier, the chancellor of the exchequer, Winston Churchill, and officials of the air ministry paid tribute to the American girl and her companions. Lady Heath herself remarked in her speech:

"We are proud to belong to the same race of human beings as these three gallant people, who have shaken death by the hand and passed him by."

Stultz and Gordon did attend this function and spoke briefly after Miss Earhart had told of the great interest in developing aviation.

At the Royal Albert Hall Miss Earhart was accompanied by Lady Heath, and they heard John McCormack, the American tenor, sing. They occupied the royal box. Miss Earhart will be the guest of Lord Londsdale at the Royal Horse Show tomorrow at Olympia, and will occupy the royal box there.

There was a tea party at the House of Commons today, sponsored by Lady Astor and Mrs. Frederick Guest, Mrs. Runciman, wife of the Right Hon. Walter Runciman, Miss Margaret Bondfield, Laborite for Wallasey, and Miss Ellen C. Wilkinson, Laborite for Middlebrough, were among those present. Lieut. Col. L. S. Amery, secretary for the Dominions office, was the first minister to greet Miss Earhart, who sat between him and former labor premier, Ramsay MacDonald.

A. Stillman, Jr., and his wife, to fly from Grand Anse to the Stillman summer home, to Grand Mere. She said they were to be at Grand Mere to meet Miss Rasche when she arrived today. She also announced that she planned to go to Grand Anse within a few days.

YOUR BOY AND YOUR GIRL

By ARTHUR DEAN, SO. D.
The Parent Counselor.

Dr. Dean will answer all signed letters pertaining to parents' problems with their boys and girls. Writers' names are never printed. Only questions of general interest are answered in this column, but all letters will be answered by mail. If written in ink and a stamped self-addressed envelope is inclosed. Address Arthur Dean, in care of this paper.

Mentioned in the Will.

HARRY was president of his class. He was an excellent student, a fair athlete, socially very prominent.

Everything was favorable for a successful career. But Harry's aunt died and left him $50,000. From that day to this we have heard from him. The income from $50,000 would have paid Harry to college. It would have paid his expenses for training in law or medicine. A fifth of the principal would have given him a fine set-up in his professional career. Had he chosen to become a physician it would have given him opportunity for post-graduate study abroad. And it is quite conceivable that this youth might have made a real contribution to medical science and so to the world.

Or, had Harry preferred business to a profession, half his inheritance would have purchased a substantial interest in an established business. But alas! I wish that aunts and grandpas would put in their wills for their young heirs this simple item: "To my dear beloved young relative I bequeath the heritage of a good name and the opportunity to make their own way in the world unhampered by wealth too easily acquired."

A reader of this column of condolence presents the following picture of what easy money—and not much at that—plus a too-lenient and unforeseen father did to the habits and prospects of a pampered son. Listen while this timely tale unfolds:

"My brother is now 20. Our parents died four years ago. Dad never made brother do anything he did not want to do because it was easier for father to do it himself. We children were each left a few thousand dollars, enough to help my brother through college. But he did not apply himself, failed in his studies and was sent home. I can't but feel that his lack of early discipline contributed to this. It was not due to lack of ability, for he has a high intelligence rating. It is due to inability to apply himself. Now he loaf around, sleeps all the forenoon, sits around or plays golf the rest of the day and goes out with his friends in the evening. So far as it goes, it's grand, but what of the future?"

"I want to help him and yet I don't want him to depend on me. He must learn to shift for himself. How can I bring him to a serious, purposeful view of life. Help me before he becomes more of a problem."

"The finest things that any boy could wish to inherit are:

1. A clean, healthy body, an inspiring mind; the capacity for accomplishment; a desire to participate in the workaday world; a firm belief that life is worth living and that it must be well expressed spiritually, physically, and mentally to be fully enjoyed; and, finally, vocational preparation.

I advise you to see some influential successful man who is a friend of your family. State frankly the situation and ask this man to talk with your brother in a fatherly fashion and bring the youth to a realization of the life and its purposes now—while there is still time. Such a man will give your brother a plan of action and an objective in life.

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER.

Jack Up.

I am deeply in love with a chauffeur who is $45 a week older than I am. He is as old as I am in that line of work. He wants to please me and set up a candy store but he doesn't know anything about the candy business. What do you advise?

Answer—Dear "Twenty-One," I am old enough to be your father, and shall invoke the prerogative of age. Deep down in your heart, pride—a false pride—is gnawing at you. You are "hinking." What then for other girls say? What will my friends think if I marry a chauffeur? Your attitude is wrong. Do you know that only two men out of every hundred make $50 per week—not a great deal more. I assume your sweetheart is under 30. If so, he is doing well. Now, I applaud ambition, and if you are ambitious for him can't you visualize a future where your man can establish, perhaps, a taxicab business and "truck" business? Talk with him along these lines and see if you two can open a future that will satisfy both of you. It is a hazardous undertaking. Think it over and write me again.

Selling an Idea.

How can I cure my youngest of ever-astutely teasing forgeries?

Answer—Put the boy on an allowance which is a little less than you can "hinking." Then for all penalties in excess of the sum and up to the point you can afford require him to do definite little tasks around the house. By this method you will relieve yourself of the annoyance, train your boy in the habit of work and thrift and give him a valuable lesson in the value of money.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

SOLVING THE DIABETES PROBLEM.

Dr. JOSLIN says the problem of diabetes is solved, so far as the well-informed clinician is concerned. The people who can obtain his services can reasonably expect to live out their life expectancy and to die from some intercurrent, such as fall from an airplane or choking on butter.

The great problem at present is how to make the information now in hand available for all people who are afflicted with the disease. Note he is writing about problems of care of the diabetic with the developed disease. The great problem of prevention is far from being solved. When we read Dr. Joslin's presentation more closely we find that as old problems are solved new problems come into view.

In former years the diabetic died rather abruptly. Now he continues to live for a long period. Diabetic Jews now live on an average ten years after their disease is diagnosed. This longer life of the diabetic has increased the number of diabetics in the midst. Dr. Joslin thinks this number may be as high as one and a half million. Diabetics who live well-regulated lives are in practically no danger. How a diabetic can escape the danger of coma is one of the bits of information that should be made general. The longer life of the diabetic has himself the problem of infections in diabetics.

Joslin holds that many diabetics die because they do not watch their feet. In nearly 50 per cent of over 600 cases death was due to arterio-sclerosis of the vessels of the legs or some organ. When the vessels of the legs are diseased dry feet are likely to result in infections. Therefore he is strong for foot washing as a part of the daily habit of the diabetic. The problem of cleanliness of the skin is becoming more important as the span of life of the diabetic increases. Likewise the problem of arterio-sclerosis and the diet which leads thereto.

Dr. Joslin thinks that in steering the diabetic away from the rock of starch and sugar we are likely to steer him onto the rocks of blood fats and have him develop high blood pressure. He is not in favor of the higher, richer diets for diabetics which some men allow, because they promote high blood pressure. He would limit the use of eggs especially.

Just so with bodily weight. All men and women over 50 are much better off if they are a little below weight. He is not in favor of a diet or other treatment of diabetes which brings the weight up to the average for height.

And, finally, he is against having the diabetic fall into the invalidism point of view. He strongly advises his young diabetics to join Boy Scouts and in all ways to look at life as other boys and girls do.

MOTHER'S MILK FOR BABY.

C. W. M. writes: If you are not a hundred per cent successful in your faithful teaching that babies should have mother's milk, why not attack the problem from the mother's side? It is best for the mother to nurse the baby. She regains health, strength and looks more surely in six or eight months of quiet home life than she would by her usual hectic round of clubs, charities or business.

My experience in following your advice with my four children was that I was healthier in their first years than I was in the intervening years, when the cares of this world (good things, but not pleasures) kept me intense and exhausted.

Perhaps, too, you could give the expectant mother a hint as to the entertainment this constant moving picture would be in the home, the comedies and tragedies daily enacted.

SALT AND THE KIDNEYS.

A. W. writes: I have been greatly troubled with constipation, but have found that drinking a quart of water with a teaspoonful of salt every morning before breakfast is a great help. Lately I heard that this is very bad for the kidneys. Is there any truth in this?

REPLY.

There is rather general agreement that an excess of salt in the diet throws a strain on the kidneys. It is regarded as especially harmful in Bright's disease and heart disease with dropsy. However it is contended by its proponents that neutral salt solution does not absorb and therefore taking it does not tax the system. Probably the solution you use is about what is meant by a neutral solution.

Mr. Work's Pointer On Auction Bridge

CONTINUING the series of bidding questions, how many of the three following can you answer before reading the replies? Score in all cases love-all (nothing-noting).

TODAY'S HAND.

1. What should West (Second Hand) declare with the above hand: South having bid one No Trump?

2. What should North (Third Hand) declare with it: South having bid one No Trump and West having passed?

3. What should North (Third Hand) declare with it: South and West having passed?

THE ANSWERS.

1. Pass, although the hand offers a teasing double. It has strength in both majors, but falls short of doubling strength. Three Aces are not sufficient to justify a double, and the fourth possible winner is far from being an assured one. If each of the Majors contained four cards, the double would be more excusable because, in that case, a Major answer from East would have a reasonable chance of producing game; but as the hand stands, an answer from East is not apt to be a game-producer unless East is strong enough to make a lead-directing bid, in which case the double would be unnecessary.

2. Two No Trumps or pass. A pass would not be unbecoming because the hand is so strong that adverse bidding is not apt to be objectionable; nevertheless, strange as it may sound, two No Trumps is more conservative. That bid almost certainly would end the chance of a lead-directing bid by East and without such lead-director there is every probability that South will be able to go game. Of course, East might not have a lead-directing bid to make; if so, the jump would be unnecessary.

3. Pass. The hand is never swift in the making of a gift. Slowly on he goes. Man who wants life's beauty soon, Has to wait till middle-age. For the budding rose, Unto all who would be great Father Time says: "Work and wait."

Oh be patient, eager man, Life is purposed to a plan. Wisdom comes with years. Time will teach you as you grow. Everything you want to know When the need appears. Even mysteries sublime Hand that shed never get them done.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Man impatient to possess All he wants of happiness Works with feverish hands, Striving for his whim today, But Old Father Time says: "Nay! Toll and till your lands, O'er that wall will ivy climb Not tomorrow, but in time."

Man would have a maple tree At a certain spot where he wishes birds to nest. "Now I'd have it!" is his cry. "It may be that I shall die. 'Ere it's at its best. 'Tis some twenty years to grow."

Father Time is never swift In the making of a gift. Slowly on he goes. Man who wants life's beauty soon, Has to wait till middle-age. For the budding rose, Unto all who would be great Father Time says: "Work and wait."

Oh be patient, eager man, Life is purposed to a plan. Wisdom comes with years. Time will teach you as you grow. Everything you want to know When the need appears. Even mysteries sublime Hand that shed never get them done.

Poly Surprises Herself

Still no Mitzl. Polly, however, is working on clues before she telephones Dad. The lady in the large hat says she remembers that Mitzl went off with a lot of her friends. Polly spent the time changing into a sleeveless printed linen dress with a long vestee.

Mitzl isn't anywhere that Polly can see. Moreover no one can find her. It's no fun sitting all alone in a new printed chiffon dress with a cape shoulder. It's very becoming and Polly would very much like some one around to tell her so. Well, she'll have Mitzl paged.

The Earth's Noisiest Insect

MANY an insect makes a noise, but the prize must be given to the cicada for the loudest "music." Clinging to a branch of a tree, it takes part in a concert which might do credit to a brass band. Charles Darwin reported he heard cicadas while aboard a ship anchored a quarter of a mile from the coast.

The Cicada.

Some cicadas are known as "dog-day harvest flies." They come forth in the hottest days of the summer, make their noise, and lay their eggs. Then they die.

The eggs hatch into "bugs" which crawl to the soil and remain there during two winters. When they return to the surface, shed their skins, and find that their wings are gone. They repeat the actions of their ancestors.

Other cicadas are called "17-year cicadas." They bear this name because they live under the ground for 17 years.

WIVES OF TOMORROW

By FRANCES McDONALD

DEAR Miss McDonald: I find myself in the same state of mind as I have been in for some time. I have been thinking of you lately. Sometimes it worries me quite a bit when I think of how many boys I have let pet me, though I have never gone the lengths some do. But the only way I can console myself is by thinking, "Well, I am the type who loves a good time and can not be happy spending all my evenings in the house after working all day," and I have been working some time. It gets so monotonous, you know.

So when I get a chance to go out I do so. But I will tell you truth, Miss McDonald, if you ask me, I am not these days you are "out of luck" when it comes to dates. Besides, some boys appeal to you and you really like them. They tell you how crazy they are about you and it is hard when it is your nature to be made a fuss over, and some one you like, and think likes you, is doing this very thing. I don't know what to do.

Shall I stay in and stagnate or go out, have a good time, and be sorry and hate myself afterwards? Some times I think the former is preferable, and sometimes I just crave the excitement of it all. I must say I do not understand myself.

There are times when you have every intention of just going out to dance and enjoy yourself in a perfectly harmless way. But the boys of today are so versed in the art of seduction that they wear you out, and your good intentions are gone. And most people consider me a girl with a lot of character. Some friends speak of me as being a wonderful girl. People say nice things about me, and I feel ashamed. I have a wonderful mother, too. I often talk things over with her, but I don't think she understands the situation of today as well as the young people who are thrown out into the temptation, although she has an idea, and she has a lot of confidence in me and in my friends. Perhaps you can let me see myself and tell me just how to handle the situation. If so, publish as much of this letter as you wish, and answer me, please. I think I never want to see a man again but you get over that.

LEAGUE LEADERS WILL MEET AT COLLEGE GAMES SUNDAY

Saints Meet Georgetown Ball Club

Unbeaten Teams Tied, Clash at Barracks for Section Lead.

Ross and Auths Meet; J. C. C. Club Invades Alexandria.

TWO banner games in unlimited sections A and B of the Capital City league will be played on Sunday, both on the Barracks diamond, when the Georgetown A. C. and the St. Josephs clash at 3 o'clock for the leadership of section A and the Ross Council Team and the Auths meet at 1 o'clock in a game in which the Auths will have an opportunity of pulling up on an equal footing again with the Ross nine.

The Georgetown-St. Josephs clash has been the game the fans have been anticipating for weeks. Both have undefeated clubs and have been walking over all opposition, and after Sunday's battle one of the two will go into the lead and may never be headed for the balance of the season, unless the Dreadnaughts, who have yet to meet the J. C. C. Club, manage to pull up to both teams, complicate matters.

While the leaders are clashing in both sections the other teams will have an opportunity of making a run for the top, providing they can finish on the winning end of their own personal argument.

The Dreadnaughts will be given a hard battle in section A by the Jewish Community Center Team, as Drefuss, an Alexandria boy, will go to the mound for the Center nine. The Celtics, who are near the top, must meet the Woodridge nine.

In section B the Douglas A. C. will benefit by having the Ross team and the Auths scrapping each other, providing it can win from the District Heights Team. The Heights team still is within striking distance of the leaders, with plenty of time to catch them.

The Business will play again on the home diamond against the Addison club. The Petworth club will meet the Maryland A. C. on the Silver Spring diamond. Chevy Chase will play the Shamrocks on Friendship field, while in the other section B games the Doves will meet the Army War College Team on their diamond, Third and Benning roads, with the Eagles playing the Medical Center Nine on Terrett field in Anacostia.

Bond Clothiers Off On Four-Game Trip

The Bond Clothiers, one of the leading amateur baseball teams of the District, will present an all-star line-up when they engage Harrisonburg, Covington and Annapolis in a four-game series this week-end.

In addition to the regular team, Manager Earl Moser is making an effort to add some additional talent to his team for the coming series.

Among those already on the Bond team are Dick Hughes, Tom Long, Smith Vanlandingham, Sam Harvey, Jim Corson, Robbie Magee, Ben Freed, Bill Banta, Tommy David and Pat Collins. Manager Moser desires to hear from players who would like to sign with his organization. Call Franklin 1853 for further information.

Woodberry Golfers Dixie Title Finalists

The final match of the golf tournament for the amateur championship of the South, played this year at Dallas, Tex., brought together on Saturday opponents two players who had received their college preparatory training at Woodberry Forest School, Watts Gunn of Atlanta, and C. S. Carlton, of Houston. Carlton, who won the title, defeated Carlton, 7 up and 6 to play.

Carlton was a member of the class of '29 at Woodberry and won the title as a schoolboy both showed unusual ability as golfers, and frequently traded off rounds of golf on the nine-hole school course. In fact, Gunn is credited with a round of 34, two under par for the course.

Both Gunn and Carlton were also good at other sports. Gunn played on the football and basketball teams and was captain of the basketball team. Carlton pitched on the baseball team for two years and was a regular half back on the football team. Of course, both were members of the golf team throughout their stay at Woodberry. Gunn was captain of the golf team of 1925.

Former Middleweight Champions Set Pace Too Fast for Fighters of Present-Day Era

HARRY GREB

JACK DEMPSEY The Nonpareil

In the good old days when fighters were fighters and ring-side seats were two for five, the champions, barefisted or otherwise, stepped out and did their stuff. Jack Dempsey, the nonpareil, and the great Stanley Ketchel were among the best middleweights who ever drew on a glove. And Harry Greb was not far behind them.

By WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN
(Associated Press Staff Writer).

NEW YORK, June 25.—Mickey Walker apparently can not lose in Chicago. The eighteenth middleweight champion not only won the title, but also made his first serious domestic defense of it there when he received the verdict over Ace Hickkins.

Many fans were astounded at the verdict, but they did have the satisfaction of seeing two modern boxers in a slugging struggle for ten rounds—something not always to be witnessed, despite the high prices exacted today for ring-side vantage points.

While Walker never will be recorded as one of the super-greats of the middleweight division, he apparently is the best we have today and is always ready to risk his crown when the price is right, which it very seldom is.

The first Jack Dempsey and Bob Fitzsimmons of the earlier days and Stanley Ketchel in the more modern era stand as the greatest fighters the middleweight class has produced. None of these needs any of the hallooing lent by the passage of years. The old timers perhaps never will agree on the relative merits of the three leaders.

The middleweight championship dates back to April 13, 1867, when one Tom Chandler defeated Bob Walker, a now-unfamiliar name, in California for $5,000 and the title. Chandler soon retired, and George Rooke was recognized as king in 1868. Rooke defended the title successfully until 1871, when Mike Donovan took it from him.

Donovan never was defeated, and technically remained champion until July 30, 1884, when Jack Dempsey, the Nonpareil, defeated George Fullington, a now-unfamiliar name, in the Southern States, and he was the champion, perhaps the greatest of all the middleweights, proved himself every inch a champion so long as he held the title. He defended it for 11 years, and then lost a questionable decision to George LaBlanche in San Francisco on August 27, 1899.

Dempsey was knocked out, right under par for the course.

Both Gunn and Carlton were also good at other sports. Gunn played on the football and basketball teams and was captain of the basketball team. Carlton pitched on the baseball team for two years and was a regular half back on the football team. Of course, both were members of the golf team throughout their stay at Woodberry. Gunn was captain of the golf team of 1925.

LYNCHBURG U. PARE SCORES GETS 4 D. C. AT COLLEGE ATHLETES TITLE NETS

Munro, Depro, May, Mesmer, Also of G.U., Keefe, High Stars, Wins Match in Second Round.

A QUARTET of more of District high school stars from two schools plans to enter Lynchburg University, Va., this coming fall. The group consists of Jimmy Munro and Louis Depro, of Eastern, and Charley May and Richard Keefe, of Business.

Of this group, Munro, who has starred in football and baseball at Eastern High School, and who was named as one of the most outstanding players in the high school football series last fall is the most sure to go.

Munro played center with the Eastern football team, and he was named for the championship this season after getting away to a bad start. Munro is eligible to compete at Eastern another year, because of the fact that he can bring his credits up to requirements, plans not to return to Eastern next season.

He will be missed in both football and baseball, as he would have been a star in both sports. On the gridiron team, which, because of few losses, looked as another championship team. In baseball, Munro filled the backstop position capably.

May and Keefe, of Business, and Depro, of Eastern, have not yet fully decided to attend Lynchburg. As the freshman rule will go into effect until 1930, the three, who would be eligible to play in their first college year if they decide to enter the Virginia school, may, rated the best all-around athletes in recent years, play football, basketball and baseball. Keefe was captain of the basketball team and played third base on the baseball team.

Depro captained the Eastern Basketball Team this season and played in the backfield on the football team. All three are at least one year away from all-high recognition in one or more sports.

FISHERMAN'S LUCK

UP where a feeder of the Potomac winds its way through mountains, to be exact, it is in West Virginia and is commonly termed the South Branch of the Potomac, fortunate fishermen are hooking trout with abandon and without thought of the weary angler of the District of Columbia, who casts and reels without result in the main stream of the same river.

Several ardent anglers have returned from the West Virginia area reporting excellent trout fishing and have little sympathy for the anglers of the District of Columbia, who cast and reels without result in the main stream of the same river.

Yesterday the Potomac was raging, as it has so often since early spring. High and muddy water greeted the angler along the entire stretch of the river, and the favorite fishing hole, while he contemplated the success of the brother fisherman in West Virginia.

Rivermen hold out little hope for improvement for some days to come and, despite the fact that boatmen of the salt area claim that the fish family will soon flock to their keels, those who have frequented these spots hold out but small hope for the near future.

It may appear far-fetched, but this column gathered a bit of information yesterday that undoubtedly will prove good news to the true sportsman. Edmund Fairweather, of the distribution department of the Bureau of Fisheries, was the bearer of tidings.

According to Mr. Fairweather, there has been a gradual increase of shad over a period of years that became alarming four years ago and last year it was the consensus of opinion that the species of fish would be extinct hereabouts in the near future.

For three years the largest number of shads in the possession of the bureau's hatchery at Bryant Point, Md., was 2,000,000. This year Mr. Fairweather reports that 4,000,000 young shads have been dumped at various points in the Potomac. Within three years this group alone will be ready for the angler and the spring of 1928 will be forgotten. And for the present he knows that the shad has returned.

Shad come to fresh water to breed and return to salt water to mature. Recent storms broke nets near the bay, permitting shad in large numbers to come up the Potomac to spawn. Here's hoping for bigger and better storms on the bay in 1931.

Over the week-end several anglers were observed trying their luck in the Tidal Basin. Several dyed-in-the-wool optimists avowed that they had seen numerous bass cavorting there, but a pitiful few showed any specimens as proof of the presence of the illusive bass.

All that upper Potomac fishermen had to report during the last few days was the old faithful catfish. Reports are to the effect that one specimen of "cat" fairly caught recently near the Chain Bridge weighed 27 pounds, but so far the lucky angler has modestly kept his name from becoming public.

The Chain Bridge catfish, by no less an authority than Mr. Fairweather, of the Bureau of Fisheries, beats by 3 pounds the famous "Bozo" captured only a year or two ago near the Chain Bridge, which weighed 24 pounds.

SPORTS YEAR SUCCESS AT EMERSON

Grid and Basketball Teams Made Envyable Records.

WITh the exception of baseball, athletics at Emerson Institute this past year scored higher than any other since the inception of sports at the school several years back.

It was during the football season that athletics at Emerson first attracted attention. Beginning slowly, the eleven, under the coaching of Irving Sanborn, advanced rapidly until at the end of the season a terrific pace was being set against all opponents.

The team won more games than ever in the career of Emerson football, losing but one encounter, that to Gonzaga at the start of its schedule—and winning all of the rest. Its biggest win of the season was over Devitt, when it handed the Georgetown School a 6-0-0 defeat. Devitt later won the District prep school championship against Gonzaga in the big game of the year at American League park.

Inspired by the unusual showing on the gridiron, the Emerson athletes carried on in basketball, having one of the fastest prep school teams on the courts.

Again Irving Sanborn tutored the team in this sport, and his great work aided in the bringing of the floor game to its height for Emerson. The team played through an unusually strenuous schedule—35 games to be exact—winning 24 and losing 11.

In these two sports, football and basketball, Sanborn developed several capable players in Cassius Price, Jenkins Gass and others of gridiron recognition and Buscher, Abramson, Davidson and Burns in basketball.

The baseball team was far below the standard of its predecessors and went through an in-and-out season. The team lacked the necessary polish to win consistently and thereby suffered. Harry Branfield coached this outfit and did very well with the material at hand, developing an especially coming pitcher in Ray Davidson, left-hander, who, after a slow start, hurled a number of brilliant games. Davidson's most notable achievement on the mound was a no-run, no-hit game against Swanton, in which control was his main forte.

Taking the athletic season at Emerson as a whole, the school enjoyed very much success, a success which was highly gratifying to Coaches Irving Sanborn and Harry Branfield, who worked hard in developing green material into experienced caliber.

Graham McNamee and Marley Sherris again will take their places before the microphones of the National Broadcasting Co. Maj. J. Andrew White for the Columbia System, headed by Station WOR, Newark, and Q-Lin Ryan for Station WGN, Chicago.

Claude G. Bowers, heralded as a new star of oratory, will make the keynote speech soon after 8 p. m. (Washington time). The corps of newspaper correspondents who helped the radio audience to a clearer understanding of just what went on in the convention hall at Kansas City have moved on to Houston and will appear before the microphones there.

The equipment used in Convention Hall in Kansas City has been duplicated at Houston, and although a couple of breaks in the lines caused suspension of the broadcasts from the former for a few minutes, it is believed every necessary precaution has been taken and that all will go smoothly.

Station WRC, in Washington, will again be in the hook-up.

The following are included in the program scheduled by WRC tonight, subject to interruption in case a night session of the Democratic convention is held. Massenet's "Meditation" from "Thais" will be played by the "Singing Violins" during the broadcast of the Seiberling Singers at 7:30 o'clock. The program opens with the rollicking "Routabout Song" from "Rain or Shine." Jimmy Melton will offer two solos—Toselli's "Serenade" and the ballad, "Bird Songs at Eventide."

Arthur Porter's Southern Four, a quartet of negro voices, will be heard during the Everybody Hour at 8 o'clock. The orchestra, under the direction of Nat Shilkret, will offer three numbers by Rudolph Friml, and the overture to the motion picture, "Abie's Irish Rose," in which Irish and Jewish tunes are interwoven.

A half hour of piano solos will be played by George F. Ross preceding the Stumber Music at 10 o'clock. Chopin's "Prelude" and "Nocturne," Haydn's "Oxen Minuet," Tchaikovsky's "Lake of the Swans," a scene from Grieg's "Peer Gynt" suite and the barcarole from Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffman" are included in this feature.

"Our Flag" is the title of a program to be presented through Station WMAL at 9 o'clock tonight under the auspices of the veterans' flag committee, representing the veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion. The presentation will open with "Call to the Colors," played by a bugler from the United States Army Band, and include a song by Mr. Pierson, announcer at Station WMAL, "A Toast to the Flag," sung by Dorothy Sherman Pierson; addresses by Lieut. Col. H. Edward Bullis, U. S. A., and Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, U. S. A.; the "Oath of Allegiance" and "The Star-Spangled Banner."
